By order of the Board,
ALEXANDER J. RALSTON, Secretary.

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE AUSTRALIAN MUTUAL PROVIDENT SOCIETY.
LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,—I have the honour to inform you that I am a Candidate for one of the vacant seats in the Directorate, to be filled up at the Annual meeting on the 23rd April.
Soliciting the favour of your votes,
I am, yours obediently,
S. A. JOSEPH.
4, O'Connell-street, Sydney.

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE AUSTRALIAN MUTUAL PROVIDENT SOCIETY.
As a Director retiring in rotation, but eligible for re-election at the annual Meeting to be held on the 23rd of April, I beg respectfully to intimate that I am again a Candidate for a seat at the Board.
For the set fifteen years I have taken a deep interest and a very active part in the management of your affairs, and in the discussion and settlement of every question that tended to promote the welfare or retard the progress of the society. I have, during these years, acquired an intimate knowledge of its large and varied financial transactions, and of the nature and value of its investments throughout the Australian colonies; and I think I may fairly claim to have contributed my full share in producing those beneficial results of management that have brought the society to its present state of unexampled prosperity.
On these grounds I now appeal to you for re-election, and if you consider them sufficient you will please to favour me with your votes by inserting MY NAME in your Voting Papers, along with the name of any other candidate you may think qualified for a seat at the Board.
Your obedient servant,
ALEXANDER CAMPBELL.
Sydney, 31st March, 1879.

Having been informed by several members within the last few days that statements calculated to defeat my election have been freely made in private circulars and by paid agents, employed to solicit votes for one of the other candidates, I take the earliest opportunity of intimating that such statements have NO FOUNDATION, so far as they refer to me.
Members who have been induced to part with written votes under the influence of these misrepresentations may correct their mistake by VOTING PERSONALLY at the ballot on the day of election; and those who are still unpledged in any way will do well to remain in that position until the Annual Meeting, when I shall make a statement on the subject.
I remain, &c.,
ALEXANDER CAMPBELL.
Sydney, April 12, 1879.

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE AUSTRALIAN MUTUAL PROVIDENT SOCIETY.
I have the honour to inform you that I am a CANDIDATE for re-election as a Director of our Society, at the ensuing Annual Meeting, and solicit your vote and interest.
Yours faithfully,
ISAAC ELLIS IVES.

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

TUESDAY, APRIL 22.

PETITION.

Mr. MACLEAY presented a petition on behalf of a public meeting, held in Sydney, requesting the Council not to sanction the Parliamentary Powers and Privileges Bill. The petition was read by the clerk, and received.

PAPERS.

Sir JOHN ROBERTSON laid on the table abstract of sites for cities, towns, and villages; abstract of Crown lands authorised to be dedicated to religious and public purposes, abstract of Crown lands reserved from sale for water supply.

PATENTS LAW AMENDMENT BILL.

The third reading of this bill was moved by Mr. SAMUEL, and agreed to. The bill was read a third time, and ordered to be returned to the Legislative Assembly with amendments.

SUPREME COURT ADDITIONAL JUDGE BILL.

On the motion that the House go into committee to consider the Assembly's message in reference to the Council's amendments,

Mr. C. CAMPBELL said he would like to hear some reason given why this House should go into committee. The Assembly had stated they would have the clauses to which a majority in this House objected, and they might just as well have had a conference on this subject as on the one on which they did have one.

Sir JOHN ROBERTSON said if this course were to be pursued—if the House were to refuse to consider a message of this kind, things must come to a dead-lock, and he was sure a majority of this House did not wish to help this about.

The motion to go into committee was agreed to without division.

The following is the Assembly's message:—

"The Legislative Assembly having had under consideration the Legislative Council's message, dated 2nd April, 1879, requesting the concurrence in certain amendments made by the Council in the Supreme Court (Additional Judge) Bill,—Disagrees from the Council's amendment in the first clause ..."

[...]

Sir JOHN ROBERTSON moved that this Committee does not insist upon its amendments disagreed from by the Legislative Assembly.

Mr. DALLEY thought the time had arrived when some notice should be taken of the repeated allusions to the possibility of a collision with the other branch of the Legislature. ...

Mr. A. CAMPBELL did not think there was any principle involved in the bill. ...

Mr. FOSTER said he thought they might feel tolerably safe in regard to the result of the motion. ...

Mr. SAMUEL said the hon. and learned member rested his case on the fact that the bill was not as the Government introduced it in the other branch of the Legislature. ...

Sir JOHN ROBERTSON said, if he thought this action that was proposed had a tendency to prevent a deadlock, he would support it. ...

Mr. DARLEY thought it was greatly to be regretted that the hon. gentleman representing the Government should say that this House was continually resisting bills sent up from the Assembly. ...

Professor SMITH thought if he had been present when the Council amended these clauses, he should have voted with the majority, but he should not now be excluded from forming a different opinion as to the ultimate issue of the question. ...

The House divided on the motion—

AYES, 9.
Robertson, John; Samuel; Gordon; Holt; Lord, G.; Cox, G. W.; Russell; Campbell, A.; Smith (Teller).

NOES, 13.
Docker; Dalley; Darley; Chisholm; Campbell, J.; Graham; Macleay; Marks; Foster; Hay, John; Busby; Campbell, C.; Moore (Teller).

The Chairman left the chair and reported to the House that the committee insisted on its amendments disagreed from by the Assembly.

The adoption of the report was fixed an order of the day for this day (Wednesday).

CHINESE IMMIGRATION REGULATION BILL.

The debate on the second reading of the Chinese Immigration Bill, on which Mr. Holt had moved an amendment, that "the bill be read this day six months," was resumed.

Mr. DOCKER had hoped that the House would have been spared the discussion of going into committee to consider the details of this measure. ...

Professor SMITH said the speech of his hon. and learned friend (Mr. Dalley) had been remarkable—remarkable in every respect. ...

open their ports to English commerce. They could not restrict, because there were too many Chinese here already, for there were fewer now than when a similar bill was rescinded. Again, they would be told that they might come in great numbers; but there was no chance of that at present. They had quite enough to do to legislate for immediate and pressing events. Were they asked to restrict the Chinese because they were useless? That could not be, for they did not crowd into their benevolent institutions. What, too, would the little towns and the gold-fields do without the Chinese to grow vegetables for them? They were an industrious frugal people that earned their own living where lighter coloured people could not. But the argument was that they were too useful; that they supplanted white labour. Where, however, were they found but on gold-fields, where Europeans could not earn a living. The Chinese had been exceedingly useful in producing vegetables where none others would cultivate them; and their industry in this way had been very beneficial as far as health was concerned. He could not imagine a freetrader like the Postmaster-General advocating this bill; in doing so he must be a freetrader allowing of limitations, and therefore not an out-and-out freetrader. There was a great misapprehension about the displacement of white labour. He thought the Chinese mostly performed work where white people would not do it. They have added capital to the country instead of taking from it. Where they objected to because they were troublesome? The testimony of the police from every quarter of the country was quite the reverse. Was it because they were depraved? That argument had been made a great deal of; but if the argument of immorality were good, it would be an argument for the exclusion of Chinese and the expulsion of those already here. But we were willing to run the risk of this immorality from Chinamen at £10 a-head. He was satisfied that there was great exaggeration about Chinese depravity; worse stories could be told of the white population of Sydney than of the Chinese. They gambled, but it was a mild kind of excitement, not hurtful to any one, and need not be interfered with. If they made themselves stupid with opium, could we throw stones at them? It was not more injurious, individually or socially, than alcoholic drinks. As to sexual immorality, they did not descend to the depths to which some people of white skins went. He could not find sufficient grounds for this restrictive legislation taking up these points of depravity or immorality. He did not think the Chinese were a kind of people desirable or pleasant as neighbours; but taking them at £10 a head did not improve the case.

Mr. GORDON said his opinion on this matter had not changed since 1858, when he voted against a similar bill as a member of the Assembly. That bill remained on the statute-book only four or five years, and was then repealed. He saw no reason for enacting a similar bill; the Chinese in the colony were smaller in number than they were when that bill was repealed. He entirely agreed with the hon. member who had moved the amendment, that the bill be read the second time this day six months.

Mr. DARLEY gave reasons for supporting the amendment. He did not agree with Mr. Dalley that the bill was called for by the voice of the country. In 1858 a bill of this kind was passed, and in 1867 it was repealed at the instance of Dr. Lang. It struck him that that bill was a reflection upon the manhood of the country—that the labour of the colony was afraid of the labour of an inferior race. There was no political necessity for the repeal of that bill, or there was no political necessity for this bill. He believed the figures showed that there were at present fewer Chinese in the colony than there were in 1867. Referring to the strike of the A. S. N. Company's seamen, he said it was not for a rise of wages, or for lessening the hours of labour; it sought to impose a mode of carrying out the business of other persons in a way they were not disposed to do. Thus was committed a crime according to the laws of England and of this colony. Call it what they might this was simply a labour question [Sir JOHN ROBERTSON: No, no]. That was his (Mr. Darley's) view, and therefore he differed with the hon. member. The restrictive portion—only a small portion of the labour of the colony, supported the seamen in their illegal combination, and that small portion of the labour of the colony had forced this bill upon the consideration of the Legislature. He was by no means satisfied that if we went to the country districts among selectors and farmers—the bone and sinew of the colony—the people would give support to a measure of this kind. He thought those members who opposed this measure, whatever may be thought of them at present, before many more years were over their heads would be thought to have taken the right view of the case.

Mr. G. H. COX said that in 1858, when a member of the Assembly, he opposed the bill then brought in to restrict Chinese immigration, and his opinions had not changed since then. He took a very broad view—that the Creator made the world for all the human race, and that we had no right to arrogate to ourselves the sole use of this land. He intended to vote against the second reading.

Mr. JOHN CAMPBELL said that twenty years ago he voted for the £10 tax on Chinese, and for a very good reason, because the Chinese then were of a different class to those that came now, being, as was said, the offscouring of gaols. But, after twenty years' experience, he found that the Chinese were not so bad after all, and he did not see why he should not change his opinions. He did not think that we, the descendants of Japhet, had anything to fear from the descendants of Shem. He was surprised that the Government had introduced the bill. He did not think there was and fear of our being swamped by Chinese, and for that reason he would vote against the bill.

Mr. ALEXANDER CAMPBELL said he could not vot for the bill for two reasons. First, that no case had been made out for legislation of this kind; and secondly, that if a case had been made out, the remedy proposed to be applied would not be sufficient to cure the evil complained of. It had not been clearly shown that public opinion was in favour of such legislation. That was only to be shown by the ballot-box. When it became a question of Chinese or any other alien race coming here in overwhelming numbers, then would be the time for legislation, and he was sure that this House would do its part in preventing such a calamity. In the meantime, seeing no necessity for the bill, he would vote against it.

Sir JOHN ROBERTSON, in reply, thought it would be better to legislate in time than to wait until we were overwhelmed with Chinese, as was very likely to happen in our sparsely populated country. Successful Chinese would return to China and be the means of inducing others to come here. The unsuccessful ones, who would be unable to leave, would be fixed upon us. He did not think this question had anything to do with free trade. Trade in goods was a different thing from trade in people. There could not be out-and-out free trade in everything; we must have limitations and restrictions. It had been repeatedly stated, that the President of the United States had vetoed a bill to restrict Chinese immigration in that great country. But the President of the United States did not object to the policy of the bill; he vetoed it because it was opposed to existing treaties. Treaties, however, did not stand in our way, as was shown by the fact that the Imperial Government had allowed the bill passed by the Queensland Government. He denied that the quarrel between the A. S. N. Company and their seamen was the cause of this legislation.

The question that the word "now" be retained as part of the motion was put, and the House divided with the following result:—

AYES, 5.

Dalley	Robertson, John	Foster	Tellers.
Samuel		Macleay

NOES, 14.

Docker	Moore	Smith
Holt	Graham	Campbell, C.
Busby	Campbell, A.	Darley
Chisholm	Gordon	Cox, G. H.
Campbell, J.	Marks	[Tellers.

The question that the following words be inserted, "this day six months," was then put, and agreed to without division.

CUSTOMS' REGULATION BILL.

On the motion of Mr. SAMUEL, the Customs' Regulation Bill was recommitted for the consideration of certain clauses.

A new clause, as follows, was substituted for clause 1:—

"After the commencement of this Act, the whole of the unrepealed sections of the several Acts set forth in the first schedule hereto, shall be and are hereby repealed, except as to anything previously done under the authority of any of the said Acts, and except so far as relates to any arrears of duty or to any drawback, which shall be or become due or payable. And except so far as may be necessary for the purpose of supporting or continuing any proceeding already taken, or to be taken, after the commencement of this Act. And except as to the recovery or application of any penalty for any offence committed, or any forfeiture incurred before the commencement of this Act. And all orders and regulations and appointments duly made, and all bonds or other securities taken or licenses granted, shall, nevertheless, be valid and effectual."

Verbal alterations and emendations, making little material change, were made in clauses 2, 9, 22, 23, 25, 27, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 36, 43, 49, 60, 94, 95, 122, and schedules; and further amendments reported, the adoption of the report was fixed an Order of the Day for this day (Wednesday).

The House, at twenty-five minutes past 10 o'clock, adjourned to this day (Wednesday).

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

TUESDAY, APRIL 22.

Mr. SPEAKER took the chair at twenty-nine minutes past 4 o'clock.

QUESTIONS.

Sir HENRY PARKES, in reply to Mr. Garrett, said 699 Volunteer land orders had been issued since the Volunteer Act of 1867 was passed, and 50 were still to be issued.

Mr. WATSON, in reply to Captain Onslow, said that a book called "Men of the Time," by J. H. Heaton, was being published at the Government Printing Office. The terms and grounds for the publication of this work would be shown by a return which he would presently lay on the table.

Mr. LACKEY, in reply to Mr. Burns, said the Government intended to submit to Parliament a proposal for the construction of suburban lines of railway, probably next session.

Mr. LACKEY, in reply to Mr. Cameron, said there were sixty-two men employed on the construction of the Parramatta and Iron Cove River bridges, and the work was commenced on the 5th August last.

Mr. BAKER, in reply to Mr. M'Elhone, said no plan had been sent in of a road on the higher bank of the Manilla River.

Mr. BAKER, in reply to Mr. Greenwood, said Messrs. Elliott held possession of part of Cowper Wharf by no authority from the Government, and they had been warned to remove all obstructions therefrom. Proceedings in reference thereto had been stayed, pending a reference to the Mining Department. A street was obstructed by the Messrs. Elliott, and peremptory orders were issued to them on the 18th instant that all obstructions should be removed within six weeks.

Mr. WATSON, in reply to Mr. Dangar, said a work called "Men of the Time" was being printed at the Government Printing Office, by authority of the Government. Mr. H. N. Montagu and his son were temporarily employed as proof readers, at the request and at the expense of Mr. J. H. Heaton. During the printing of the electoral lists some extremely urgent printing required for the Exhibition had to be done by a private firm.

Mr. BAKER, in reply to Mr. M'Elhone, gave particulars respecting certain reserves in the Upper Hunter electorate; also with reference to a road from Wybong Creek.

Mr. LACKEY, in reply to Mr. Cameron, said Good Fridays and Christmas days were considered as Sundays, and in the Locomotive and Permanent Way branches the men were not paid for those days. The question whether the men should be paid for these days would be taken into consideration, and any decision arrived at would be made to extend to all the workmen.

Mr. LACKEY, in reply to Mr. Dangar, said three months' extension of time was granted to the contractor for the railway from Werris Creek to Gunnedah, on account of the opening to Breeza. The extended contract would expire on the 30th September next.

Mr. HOSKINS, in reply to Mr. Dangar, said certain portions of land had been dedicated as the site for a hospital at Wallgett. No trustees had been nominated.

Mr. LACKEY, in reply to Mr. Dangar, said the question of making provision for certain bridges in the Gwydir electorate would be considered before the preparation of the next estimates.

TEMPORARY SUPPLY.

The SPEAKER intimated that he had received from the Lieutenant-Governor a message recommending that provision be made for expenditure in connection with the public service during April.

It was ordered that the message be refered to a Committee of Supply.

PAPERS.

There was laid on the table of the House by Mr. HOSKINS an abstract of sites for cities, towns, and villages; by Mr. WATSON, a return showing payments made out of the Church and School land fund to Roman Catholic Bishops from 1870 to 1878, with returns as to how they were applied; and by Mr. LACKEY, a statement showing approximately the value of the Fitzroy Docking Establishment.

It was ordered that the documents be printed.

THE COPYRIGHT BILL.

A message was received from the Legislative Council to the effect that the Copyright Bill had been agreed to, with certain amendments.

It was ordered that the consideration of the amendments stand an order of the day for the following day.

PAPERS MOVED FOR.

Captain ONSLOW moved,—"That there be laid upon the table of this House a copy of the petition of Mr. Henry Bayliss, Police Magistrate at Wagga Wagga, to the Governor and Executive Council, with the report of Mr. Fosbery thereon, and all other documents relating to the same."

Mr. CAMERON moved,—"That there be laid upon the table of this House copies of all papers, minutes, and reports from the Examiner of Coal Fields, or the Inspector of Coal Mines, relative to the recent pitfall at the Wallsend Colliery."

Mr. GREENWOOD moved,—"That there be laid upon the table of this House copies of all correspondence between Denominational school teachers and the Council of Education in reference to an allowance for house rent."

The motions were agreed to.

MEDICAL BILL.

Dr. BOWKER moved,—"That this House will, on Friday next, resolve itself into a Committee of the Whole to consider the expediency of bringing in a bill to amend the law respecting the qualifications of medical practitioners." This was the most important matter he ever in his life had spoken of. It was a matter which he had spoken about for many years, and it was on substantially the same matter that he wrote to the Herald very soon after he came to the colony. The motto of the Herald then was "Sworn to no master, of no sect am I," but it had a very different motto now. However, at that time he wrote to the Herald on this matter with the view to raise the status of medical practitioners, and that was the object of this bill. By raising the status of medical men we increased their efficiency, which was of immense importance to the State—(hear, hear)—and to everyone who lived in the country. He knew there were some objectors to the bill, but when we examined the calibre of those objectors, we could see upon what grounds they objected. In New South Wales more than 12,000 people died every year under the charge of medical practitioners, and it must therefore be of great consequence to everyone in the country that they should be efficiently and properly attended. Then came the question, was raising the status of medical practitioners likely or not to increase their efficiency? And he maintained that it was, and that any one who said anything to the contrary was of that calibre of men who said that medical matters were merely matters of opinion. As long ago as 400 or 500 years before the Christian era, medical matters began to be a science. Hypocrates, who was called the father of medicine, wrote his cases and cures on the walls of the temples, and made deductions from them. They were called aphorisms; and then the practice of medicine began to be a science, continuing, with several interruptions, ever since; and now it was a science of great importance. John Hunter, the celebrated English surgeon, said he regarded a knowledge of the whole organic and inorganic world as necessary for a just conception of the structure and functions of man; and what, therefore, could be more important than the science which had to do with so large a matter. If medicine were a perfect science there would be no need of this bill, but it was not a perfect science, and the medical body required improving. They were all liable to mistakes, but that was no reason for having a staff less efficient than we should have. Many of those who spoke against such a bill as this spoke of the mistakes of medical men, but that was a strong reason why they required improving. He believed that much of the opposition to this bill was owing to the idea that it was intended to put down homoeopathy. There was no such intention; the bill would make a distinction between properly qualified medical men and those not properly qualified; and there was a distinction to be made between homoeopathic men properly qualified and those not properly qualified. We had some in the town who were regularly qualified men, but practised homoeopathy. It was not intended that this bill should touch them, or prevent anyone from practising whether qualified or unqualified; the desire was to make a distinction—to show who were qualified, and who were not qualified, in order that the status of those who were qualified might be improved, and therefore that there might be more pains taken by young men who studied medicine to improve their efficiency. We had lots of young men going home from New South Wales to study medicine, and it was a nice thing for them to come back and find themselves on the same level with a lot of quack doctors. But it was not on account of the medical men that the bill was wanted; it was on account of the public. There were many well-qualified medical men who assumed titles that they had no business to assume, and the bill would prevent that, as it would prevent quack doctors from assuming such titles. He had seen dreadful results from cases which had been treated by quack doctors, and the people should certainly know to whom they could most safely go. If the bill were something fanciful and an innovation, there would be some reason for opposing it, but it was neither fanciful nor an innovation, and in every civilized country it had been found necessary to have legislation of this kind, only much more strict. So long ago as the year 1224, the Emperor Frederick II. (he took this from Billroth's "Surgical Pathology and Therapeutics," published in 1877) "introduced a law by which these physicians were obliged to study logic (i.e., philosophy and philology) for three years, medicine and surgery for five years, and finally had to practice for some time under the supervision of an older physician, before obtaining the right to practice on their own account; or as an examiner lately remarked of the physicians who had just graduated, 'before being let loose on the public.'" From very old time indeed the necessity for having an efficient body of medical men was recognized, and it was not for the sake of the physician but for the sake of the public. Then we had Cicero who said long after that in nothing did men approach nearer to the gods than in the office of giving health to mortals; and yet we were according to the opponents of this bill, to continue to place a body of qualified men on a level with one of the vilest of men, a quack doctor. A man who affirmed that he could do what he knew he could not do, and so attended and watched a poor creature die under his treatment, was the very vilest of men. But he should be wearying the House too much if he went into the question now. He was afraid he should be counted out. [Mr. M'ELHONE: It is a Government night.] He did not speak of individual cases of qualified and unqualified men. But this he said, that taking 1000 qualified men and 1000 unqualified men the sick would be better tended by the qualified men, and it was for numbers that legislation had to be enacted. It was of no personal advantage to him to see the bill passed. All he wished was to have the satisfaction of doing a benefit to New South Wales. In the Saturday Review of the 14th July, 1877, it was written:—

"It would not seem too much to require that persons who undertake the medical care and treatment of disease should previously show themselves competent to perform what they profess, even though they may be willing to forego the assumption of distinctive appellations."

This was strongly in favour of medical legislation, and of legislation much stronger than this bill wished to give. This bill did not wish to interfere with any member of the community going to whomsoever he might choose, whether qualified or not. Formerly it was a crime, and in most other countries it was now, for any one to practice without being qualified. England took a more liberal—he would not say a wiser view. Seeing that the Government licensed omnibus drivers to drive ussafely, and that they required military men to undergo an examination before taking command of an army, and prevented masters from going to sea in charge of ships unless qualified, surely they ought not to neglect provision being made for the safety of the public health. Seeing that 12,000 people here died annually under the charge of medical men. it was highly necessary that they should be men who possessed the advantages of education, which in other countries they were required to possess. The Parliament had no right to refuse the people the advantage of a bill protecting them in the important matter of their health. He remembered some time ago in the course of a trial of somebody against Halkett, that a witness excused himself for calling a medical man, who was not qualified because he had "doctor" written on his door. People coming here from other countries could not believe that the law did not afford them protection in this matter. He contended that it was the duty of the State to legislate with a view to raise the status of medical men, in order that they might have better evidence given on public trials. The most miserable evidence was given by medical men on trials sometimes. He remembered having an assistant at Newcastle, who, when he came to him, did not know the inside of a stomach from the outside. After a time this assistant left him and went to practise for himself. A man was tried for rape, and evidence was given, by this assistant, as to whether the crime had been committed, although that was a case requiring the utmost care and skill. The assurance of life was a national matter, and on the ground of having men well qualified to distinguish disease for life assurance purposes, it was desirable that this bill should pass. And for sanitary reasons—the most important of all—a bill was required. They had heard a good deal about sewage and nuisances connected therewith. Disease was caused by this. To prevent the disease, the medical man must know its nature, and how it was produced. The question of the best mode of treating the sewage was a most difficult one to deal with, and for this reason alone they ought to have an efficient body of medical men to consider it. He knew that there were some men in the Assembly who thought that all these matters of disease might be known by supernatural means, and no doubt they would oppose this bill. It had been said by one who was thought to be a good authority that medical skill was not so much a matter of knowledge as of Divine insight. He would like to know whether an infant came into the world with this Divine insight, knowing the relations of the various parts of the body, or the constitution of any particular member. How could Divine insight give that? You must have education, and a good education. (Hear, hear.) To make a good homoeopathic doctor even, you must have a good education. Homoeopathy was a matter requiring very great knowledge. For any and every branch of medicine to be carried on properly you wanted efficiency, and that could only be acquired by a proper education. He thought, for the sake of the community, a bill should be passed that would have the effect of protecting them from unqualified men, and increasing the efficiency of those who were qualified. Many medical men had proved themselves martyrs to their profession in the interests of the public. Besides it was a disgrace to New South Wales that they should be dependent on other countries for the supply of good medical men. He hoped for these reasons and others with which he did not wish to weary the House, that there would be no objection to go into committee on his proposal.

Captain ONSLOW would be very glad to support this bill, for an Act of some kind was certainly wanting. But he did not agree with the hon. member when he said the bill would raise the status of the medical profession. He had the highest respect for that profession, but there were some unworthy members of it, and no bill would alter that. There were no less than twenty licensing bodies in the United Kingdom, and some of them made a trade of selling licenses to men that are not fit to treat a dog. There was one University in Scotland where there was only one Scotchman and twelve Englishmen, who, he supposed, could not get a diploma in their own country. We wanted a bill, not for the protection of the medical men, but for the protection of the public. He believed the resolution which he had moved and carried in that House more than two years ago would have done good if it had been carried into effect. It was simply that a list of duly qualified medical practitioners should be exhibited in every Court-house in the colony. But the Government had never acted upon his resolution, owing to some quack influence. Rich men could get the Medical Gazette, but poor people and residents in the country were at the mercy of the greatest ruffians that the world knows. There was a man went round the country here pretending to cure sore eyes, and it was astonishing to hear the fees that man got. Then there were two others came round pretending to cure Bright's disease, and wanting to tap everybody. Some means ought to be found of putting a stop to this sort of thing. You could not prevent people from employing anybody they liked, but you could let people know whom they were employing. But we wanted a bill to protect the public against duly qualified medical men. He had known a case in which a child was given up, and a homoeopathic practitioner was called in, and the child recovered. He had known many cases of misconduct on the part of duly qualified medical men.

Mr. M'ELHONE said it was extraordinary conduct and most uncourteous on the part of the Attorney-General to object to this being taken as a formal motion. He was not himself much troubled with doctors, but he believed it was absolutely necessary to bring in a bill to compel doctors to be properly qualified, as much as it was to have lawyers properly qualified. In a matter where a man's pecuniary interests were concerned you were compelled to employ a duly qualified person, and he thought it was much more necessary where everything dear to a man was at stake. There was one case which satisfied him that a bill was necessary. There was a Dr. Van Heekeren, who, he believed, obtained a living by procuring abortion, and was making a fortune out of it. Not very long ago a celebrated case occurred, in which a man known as Widow Welch was tried and convicted. He had great pleasure the other day, when visiting Parramatta gaol, in seeing this Widow Welch doing penance for his sins. This Dr. Van Heekeren was also prosecuted criminally. He believed he had used instruments, and the girl, who had previously been strong and hearty, had ever since been weak and delicate. But because this Van Heekeren had money to employ legally qualified ruffians to defend him he managed to get acquitted, although by far the greater ruffian of the two. The sooner a law was passed to put a stop to such a scoundrel as this carrying on his nefarious trade in Sydney the better. Then there was a Chinese doctor, a Dr. George On Lee, who professed to see through a person. (Laughter.) Some time ago Dr. Bowker wrote a letter to the Herald, which they refused to publish, calling attention to the danger arising from medical men who had attended patients suffering from puerperal fever, and then going to visit other patients. These doctors pooh-poohed Dr. Bowker, but he proved to be right, and hundreds of women died who might have been alive and well now. These were duly qualified medical men. [Mr. COPELAND: And these are the men you want to protect.] We had better have some protection rather than none at all. He should support this bill.

Mr. GREENWOOD said he had great doubts as to whether this bill would have any chance of passing during the present session. He doubted whether there was any country in the world where quackery and empiricism were so rampant as in New South Wales. Was there any chance of this bill becoming law this session? He thought there was not the slightest, for it was almost impossible that it could come in on Tuesdays, and hon. members were too tired to deal with business on Fridays. Why then should the bill be brought in? He would support the motion, but he had not the smallest notion that it would have any practical result.

Mr. COHEN was disposed to agree with the hon. member that the bill had no chance of becoming law this session; but if the bill were brought in the country would have an opportunity of expressing an opinion upon it, and hon. members would come prepared at the beginnig of next session to deal with it. The mover was entitled to complain of the action taken by the Attorney-General in objecting to this motion unless the Government were prepared to express some opinion upon it. In voting for leave to introduce, hon. members did not pledge themselves to vote for the bill.

Dr. BOWKER replied, and the motion was agreed to.

CROWN GRANTS.

Captain ONSLOW moved—"For leave to bring in a bill to render valid all Crown Grants and other documents to which his Excellency the Governor has affixed a stamp instead of his sign manual." He said that some time ago it became known to the public that the Governor had been using a stamp, instead of affixing his signature in the usual way. That was a change in the usual practice which ought not to have taken place without legislative sanction. The Ministry and the present Attorney-General gave an opinion that it was perfectly legal for the Governor to affix his signature by using a stamp instead of writing it in the usual way. There was no doubt that the judgment which the Attorney-General alluded to was good as applicable to the signature of an ordinary individual, but not as against that of the representative of the reigning sovereign. When George IV. was too ill to sign his name, the Parliament passed a special Act to enable others to affix the sign manual by the King's direction, and under the most solemn sanctions and effective safeguards. [The hon. member read the Act.] His Majesty never thought of applying to his Ministers alone, and if he had, they would not have dared to have authorised such a departure from the usual course. It was a slight offered to the House. There was no doubt that the act of affixing the Governor's signature was an onerous one, but no member of the Assembly would have refused to grant means by which it might be lessened. It was only right that the House should be asked to grant those means. It had been stated that the stamp used by the Governor was under lock and seal when it was not required. That might be so, but he had been informed that on debentures the name was lithographed, and that the Government printer affixed the signature of the Governor without his knowing anything about it. It seemed very extraordinary that the Governor's signature should be affixed to documents without his knowledge or consent. It was possible that grievances or disputes would arise in consequence of a departure from use and custom in regard to affixing signatures to documents, and it was with a view to preventing litigation on the point in the future that he thought it advisable to ask for leave to introduce a validating bill, and that both Houses should be invited to concur on a matter of so much importance.

Mr. WINDEYER said that it was not his intention to oppose the bill at its present stage, but he would oppose it at the proper time, because it was perfectly clear that such a measure was unnecessary. It was to be regretted that a motion of such a kind should be made, as it tended unnecessarily to unsettle persons minds on a matter of considerable importance. No real doubt on the point could be entertained by a person who looked into it, or being a legal authority could offer a legal opinion on it. No doubt had been expressed in regard to it by the legal profession, and with regard to the Act referred to by the hon. gentleman, that was prepared for making valid signatures affixed to documents by other persons than the king which was quite a different thing from the Governor's affixing, by means of a stamp, his signature to public papers.

The question was put and passed.

RETURN: H. J. GREVILLE.

Mr. M'ELHONE moved,—"That there be laid upon the table of this House,—1. Copies of all correspondence, minutes, &c., between the Minister of Justice, the Chief Commissioner in Insolvency, and the Public Accountant who inspected the fee and other account books in the insolvency department, in reference to a deficiency in the moneys received by the chief clerk, Henry James Greville. 2. Also copies of all correspondence on the same subject by any other official." His reason for asking the House to agree to the motion arose from his being informed by a person who believed himself correct on the subject that Mr. Greville had been in the habit of using public funds for his own purposes, and that on one occasion a public accountant inspected the books and found a deficiency in them which Mr. Greville could not account for: also that the Chief Commissioner of Insolvency stopped payments being made to that man until the deficiency was made up. If the information given to him was correct the official in question should have been dismissed. There had been too many cases in which officials had stolen public money, and in hardly any case had any of them been prosecuted. If a private servant used the money of his employer for his own purposes he was almost certain to be prosecuted, and thus the public learned what kind of a person he was, but when a public servant committed a similar offence the Government let him off by simply dismissing him, thus giving him a kind of character in society which he had no right to. Of late years they had got into the way of being too lenient with officials who had been given to peculation of the public funds on account of their friends or of their being possessed of political influence. Such officials were let off, and they went forth into the world as persons of good character who could carry on their depredations in private life as they had done in public.

After Mr. F. B. SUTTOR had stated that the Government not object to the papers being produced, the motion was agreed to.

THE WAGGA WAGGA RESERVE.

Mr. M'ELHONE moved,—"That in the opinion of this House, the decision of various Ministers for Lands allowing Mr. Donnelly to purchase 490 acres out of the reserve, or common, at Wagga Wagga (dedicated as a common, and vested in trustees) is wrong, and that such decision allowing Mr. Donnelly to purchase the said land should be revoked, as such decision is injurious to the interests of the people of Wagga Wagga and the people of the colony, as it forms a bad precedent for other Ministers." In the first place he would state that the Minister for Lands had acted illegally in carrying out the decision of his predecessors. The simple fact of the land having been dedicated took it out of the power of any Minister to grant to Mr. Donnelly leave to purchase or select half an acre or any portion of it. If it was purposed to grant such leave, care should have been taken to do away with the dedication of the reserve. If the Ministers had seen all the documents in connection with the subject, he did not think they would have given the decision they arrived at; and if the Minister for Lands could see his way to assure him that Mr. Donnelly would not be allowed to purchase the land, he would be perfectly satisfied. The hon. gentleman must admit that he had no power to authorise the sale of the land. In 1864 the Hon. J. Bowie Wilson, in a report on the matter, said:—

"His Excellency the Governor, with the advice of the Executive Council, directs it to be notified that, in pursuance of the provisions of the 'Crown Lands Alienation Act of 1861,' the land specified in the schedule appended hereto shall be reserved from sale until surveyed for the preservation of water supply or other public purposes."

What was the meaning of making a reserve from sale? Was it simply a farce Ministers were guilty of acting, or was it that Ministers were only tools in the hands of squatters who erected improvements on reserves in order that they might purchase them. The law never intended anything of the kind. It was immaterial whether a man erected, on a reserve, a house worth £10,000 or a dummy house that might be shifted anywhere; the principle was the same, and no lessee should be allowed to purchase land after it had been reserved from selection. Mr. Donnelly did not purchase the run from Peters until 1874. The land was dedicated in 1864, ten years before he bought the run. Mr. Donnelly found that by purchasing land on which there was a chain of lagoons, he could levy blackmail on travelling stock. No doubt Mr. Donnelly saw this, but before he applied to purchase this land the people of Wagga made application to have it reserved and dedicated. Mr. district surveyor Bolton strongly recommended that the land should be reserved and dedicated, and Mr. Donnelly had not been hardly dealt with, for he had over twenty miles of frontage to the Murrumbidgee River, purchased, and he had got every reserve made for the public use along the Tarcutta Road, so that no one could touch them. He had no wish in carrying this resolution to censure the Government, because he was quite sure that the Minister for Lands would never have done what he had if he had known the facts of the case, and if the hon. member would state that he would see that the public should not be injured in this matter, he would withdraw the motion.

Mr. HOSKINS thought a fair discussion on this matter would be best promoted by moving the adjournment of the debate. On the 25th February he laid on the table of the House all the papers and correspondence in reference to this subject, and moved that the documents be printed. They were sent to the Government printer, and he regretted to say, although it was now many weeks since the papers were sent to the printer, the documents had not been printed and distributed amongst hon. members. It was impossible for hon. members to approach the discussion of this question on a motion of this kind unless furnished with the documents in reference to it, and therefore the House would see the reasonableness of his moving the adjournment of the debate. He would remind the hon. member that it was impossible for Mr. Donnelly to get this land until the House passed a bill revoking the previous dedication.

Mr. M'ELHONE: Then I will withdraw the motion.

Mr. GREENWOOD objected.

Mr. GARRETT said that from a faint recollection he had of the case, he thought the land was applied for by Mr. Donnelly before it was made a permanent common, and that point should be inquired into, for it would determine the way in which the case should be dealt with.

Mr. HOSKINS said he had made the inquiry.

The debate was adjourned.

RAILWAY WORKS, SOUTHERN RAILWAY.

Mr. M'ELHONE moved,—"That there be laid upon the table of this House:—1. A list of culverts and bridges, and their water-ways, between Yass and Wagga Wagga, as shown on the original plans from which contractors tendered. 2. A list of all culverts and bridges, and their water-ways, as executed by the Constructing Branch of the Railway Department. 3. A list of all culverts subsequently altered by the Maintenance Branch. 4. A table showing the original cost of all culverts and bridges, and also the present cost; also showing what saving would have been effected if done before the permanent way was laid. 5. Also showing how many 2-feet pipe culverts were substituted for 2-feet barrel culverts in cement, and at what rate. 6. Also showing how many 2-feet drain pipes were taken over by the Government from the contractor, and for what reason; and at what price, and the use they were put to. 7. Also a list showing the number of 16-inch drain pipes taken over from the contractor by the Government, for what reason, and what use they will be. 8. The additional cost of the timber viaduct over the Murrumbidgee. 9. The additional cost of the timber substituted for the embankments. 10. The whole cost of the station at North Wagga. 11. The width of the roadway left on each side of the railway through free-selected land, and which was surveyed during the construction of said railway. 12. The number of times during the last twelve months the district engineers have gone on the works under supervision. 13. The number of inspectors who have been employed on each contract, and their duties. 14. The names of the parties who were to blame when the traffic near Murrumburrah, in September, 1878, was interfered with, and the cause of the same." He said his reason for asking for this information was that a gentleman employed by the contractor, Mr. Amos, gave him a lot of information which, if proved, would show conclusively that the construction of our railways had been carried on under a very expensive and wasteful system.

Sir HENRY PARKES suggested that the hon. member should amend his resolution so as to make it apply to the Southern Railway only.

Mr. M'ELHONE consented.

Mr. M'CULLOCH objected, as he wished the House to negative the resolution.

The resolution was withdrawn.

THE LAND BILL.

Mr. GREENWOOD, in resuming the adjourned debate on the second reading of the Land Bill, said that, as he had spoken and written at length in his own name on the land question since he had taken an interest in politics in New South Wales, he thought he might be excused for expressing some opinion upon this bill before giving his vote. About five years ago he wrote some letters under his own signature in the public Press, and the opinions he expressed then he held still. And the whole results of our land legislation since then had confirmed him in these opinions. When the last bill was before the House, he gave a silent vote, first, because he felt perfectly certain that there would be a very large majority against it. The result justified his anticipations; and then he did not speak, because several others, including three of the present Ministers of the Crown, agreed not to speak so as to get a division and save time. He mentioned this because one hon. member who had asked him not to speak had since taunted him with not speaking on that occasion, although he had been prepared to speak at length. When legislation was likely to be abortive, he thought a member opposing it might be forgiven if he gave a silent vote. But it was very likely that the present bill would become law, though greatly modified by the committee. And as he thought that, and that if it became law it would be injurious to the country, he should not be doing his duty if he gave a silent vote upon it, and failed to point out what he thought were radical defects. Something had been said as to whether this bill should be a permanent or temporary measure. The hon. member for Yass Plains said that if this bill became law, they would have no more land legislation on the question for twenty years. He thought it very likely too that if this bill became law those who were promoting it thought that there would be no land legislation for a long time; and this was the secret of their proceeding. He had very grave doubts indeed whether the present Government did not take office on the basis of the passing of these little measures. He was not sure whether the Government in taking office did not do so to serve the few at the expense of the many. The voice that moved the second reading of this Land Bill was the voice of Jacob, but the hands that drew it and were to manipulate it were the hands of Esau. (Cheers.) He was not sure that the Government did not take office with a pledge to carry out the very things that the present leader of the Upper House said were required when he stood on the floor of this House. The Premier—when he met this House on the 22nd January, 1879, and explained the Ministerial programme, was reported to have said:—

"Of the measures which we propose to introduce now, one would be a bill in some respects amending the land laws of the country. (Hear, hear.) It has appeared to us that any large measure aiming at the consolidation of the law, and carrying out important principles which would involve large debate, cannot possibly be undertaken now, and probably ought not to be undertaken until there is an enlarged representation of the people in this House. (Cheers.) While that is the case it appears to us that there are some amendments of that law which have been proved by experience to be of so much importance, and which, if carried out, would beyond question confer so much benefit upon the cause of settlement in this country, that we are quite justified in endeavouring to carry out those amendments without waiting for the larger and more important measure."

Did not the Premier imply by that that they were going to deal with a few minor matters in this Land Bill—matters that they thought were imperatively called for, and that after an Electoral Bill had been passed and there was a redistribution of seats, there would be a comprehensive measure. He would ask the Colonial Secretary if he could escape from that interpretation of his words? Going a little further, he came to the Minister for Lands. That gentleman was one of the most impulsive and impassioned speakers in this House, yet the hon. gentleman spoke in such subdued tones in moving the second reading of this bill as to him appeared marvellous. He could not understand how the hon. gentleman's colleagues had made him so quiescent. The hon. gentleman seemed to him to make his words conceal the meaning of everything he said; and he had serious thoughts of moving for a select committee, with the member for Braidwood as chairman, to inquire how it was that the colleagues of the hon. member managed to mesmerise him so thoroughly to make such a speech as he did on the second reading. (Laughter.) Notwithstanding the subdued tones of the hon. gentleman, he managed to make use of the following words as reported in the Herald, and if they were wrong he would permit him to correct him:—"The Government deemed it inexpedient to introduce a comprehensive bill to provide for the consolidation of the existing land laws, because they believed that the discussion of such a measure would prolong the duration of the session to a greater length than is deemed desirable; and further, they felt it their duty also to introduce a short measure of this kind, because they have reason to believe, from opinions conveyed to them, that a large majority of the people of the interior of this country—and the residents of the interior are the persons most interested in the consideration of the land question—the Government have reason to believe that a large majority of the people of the interior are not desirous of having any comprehensive alteration of the land laws until we have an Electoral Act to provide for the increased representation of the people on a more equitable basis, and especially to provide for increased representation of the outlying districts. (Hear, hear.) It is for that reason that the Government felt it their duty in the redemption of the pledge they made to introduce a short bill, which provides that certain pledges made to our constituents shall be carried out, and also that certain anomalies in the existing laws shall be rectified." Now that was a most extraordinary statement. How did the Government get at their belief as to the opinion of the country? So far as he was aware, the only way the Government could get a conviction of the opinion of the country was by appealing to the country. They had not done that. If they had consulted this man or that man—if they had consulted Kilvein—he thought that was the person named; then they were acting a part utterly unworthy of any Government. (Hear, hear.) When Earl Beaconsfield's Government were bringing in their electoral bill they sent a number of circulars, through a Mr. Spofforth, into every part of the country to ascertain what would be the effect of such a measure. He remembered it, for one of the circulars fell into his hands. Well, the Government found that by carrying out the proposal embodied in the bill they would get in all probability a majority of Conservative votes. They carried that bill to dish the Whigs. Had the present Government got some Mr. Spofforth to find out what would be the effect of this Land Bill? He contended that the Government had no right to set in motion machinery of this kind; and if they wanted to find out the opinion of the country the proper way was to dissolve Parliament. (Hear, hear.) Then, he thought, that they would find that the country wanted a much more comprehensive measure than the little patchwork paltry bill such as this. Then, the Minister for Lands said: "The residents of the interior are the persons most interested in the consideration of the land question." He denied that utterly. The buyer had no more right to claim an interest in the land question than the seller. The seller was the country at large. The buyers might be the residents in the interior, and as a buyer he might have—nay, he had—a very great interest. But if the Government meant to support the claim of the buyer against the general claim of the seller, then the Government betrayed its trust, and was false to the country. (Hear, hear.) More than one-half of the population of New South Wales was resident in the towns. Every head of a family residing in the towns was just as much interested in the public lands as those who resided in the country. And if you gave advantages to the few who could afford to settle upon these lands at the expense of the many when the many, because of the necessities of their position, could not avail themselves of these advantages, then you did wrong to the many for the benefit of the few. That was what this Land Bill meant. The question of where the people resided had nothing to do with the question. This statement of the Minister for Lands was utterly at variance with the fundamental principles of representative government. Then the hon. member said "It is for that reason that the Government felt it their duty as the redemption of the pledge they made to introduce a short bill, which provides that certain pledges made to our constituents shall be carried out." Now, when did the Government make this pledge? and to whom? Who are "our constituents?" The constituents of the Government he supposed. He thought the Minister for Lands meant something more than that. He meant what the Vice-President of the Legislative Council said the day he left this House—that again and again a measure had been introduced into this House to alter the conditions of free selection—that many people, in expectation of these alterations, did not comply with the conditions upon which they had taken up land, because again and again measures had been introduced into Parliament for altering these conditions, and therefore, in deference to the expectation of people outside, we ought to fulfil what they had been expecting. What pledge had been made that binds the country in this matter? Because Government after Government may have proposed measures to modify these conditions, did that alter the law? There was nothing to bind the Parliament or the country in any pledges made by any individual members, or by any successive Governments, to alter the conditions of free selection. It was immoral and demoralising that any Government should propose to alter the conditions of the law, and to make that alteration retrospective. The late Government were denounced for their immoral proposition to alter the conditions of free selection for the future; and he thought if they had carried their bill a necessary consequence would have been that the conditions in the past would have been altered. But the late Government did not propose that. (Hear, hear.) The present Government, however, did propose it in regard to the past for every acre purchased since 1875—nearly one-half the whole area free selected. If the late Government were turned out of office because of the possible consequences of their proposition, what ought to be done with the present Government? The immorality attached to them directly; to the late Government it was only by implication. The present Government had an advocate infinitely more enthusiastic in favour of the bill than its putative father—he referred to Mr. Garrett. That hon. member protested against waiting for a comprehensive measure, and condemned the idea of waiting for the readjustment of the electoral power, as unpatriotic. Did not the hon. member know that the way to make measures practicable was for hon. members to speak out their minds upon them? And the best way to prevent a measure from becoming law was for hon. gentlemen to speak what they did not believe. In advocating this patchwork bill, this sham, the hon. member had done his best to make a thorough measure impossible. Now, as to the patriotism of appealing to the country. No one denied that the House could claim to represent the people of this country, and that therefore they might claim to deal with any question that came up. But for all that if there was reason to think that any leading question had not been submitted to the constituencies, did not the Government ask for a dissolution if they were defeated? This land question had not been submitted to the constituencies as a special case. For the Bogan electorate there were 8000 electors, represented by one member, and there were about ten electorates of about 500 each, with one member each—the whole amounting to only half the number of the Bogan. When it was remembered that there were such inequalities as those he thought they would see a good reason why this land question should be remitted to the constituencies. Let them have a fair representation, and then deal with this question. Unless this bill is to be rushed through the House—which imperfectly represenet public opinion—this question of dealing with the public lands is one that ought to be referred to the constituencies before there is any legislation upon it whatever. The hon. member (Mr. Garrett) had told them that South Australia had selection before survey. These statements had been made so often unchallenged that they were taken almost as gospel; but they were as false as falsehood itself, and he would give proof. He had there a copy of the Act dealing with the public lands of South Australia, which was now the law of that colony. It was in 1877, but the principles of this Act have been in force there ever since the foundation of that colony. Clause 12 says: "No Crown land shall be granted in fee simple under the provisions herein contained unless the same shall have been surveyed." (Hear, hear.) [Mr. GARRETT: Where do you find that that has been in force ever since the foundation of the colony? I say it has not, and I defy you to prove it.] The hon. member was quibbling. In the first place he was not required to prove it; it was not relevant to the present debate. The hon. member said in South Australia they had selection before survey, but here was the Act which showed that no land should be granted until the same shall have been surveyed and properly marked, and shall have been delineated upon the maps in the office of the Surveyor-General. He would ask the House whether that did not disprove one of the assertions of the hon. member. (Hear, hear.) The land law of South Australia was the best colonising law he had come across in regard to new countries, and it had succeeded, for the people of South Australia not only grew enough food for themselves, but they sent quite as much abroad. It was remarkable that we, in New South Wales, got nearly half the wheat we require from South Australia. He would go no further. It had been said it did not matter whether we grow wheat, or wool, or meat, or maize, or sugar; it did not matter what we grow, the question is what use we make of the public lands. He had heard it said again and again in that House by Sir John Robertson, that the colony of New South Wales was making better use of its public lands than any colony in the British Empire. He would test that. From 1857 to 1878—the last twenty years—the latest returns he had been able to get, South Australia had an export in those twenty years of wool, minerals, and breadstuffs, equal to £312 per head of the population of those twenty years. [Mr. GARRETT: Most of the wool came from our territory.] He did not care where it came from, but the wool that went to South Australia from our territory was very small compared with that which went to Victoria, and he might tell the hon. member that he had taken credit for every pound of wool that went from our territory to Victoria and to South Australia. The wool we received from Queensland was larger in proportion than what Victoria received from us. In Victoria, the total value of the exports per head of the mean population for the twenty years was £276, while in New South Wales it was only £2[illegible] per head, and that was taking credit for the whole of our exports—coal, tin, and other minerals, as well as pastoral and agricultural produce. What, then, became of the statement that we were making more from the lands of New South Wales than were the people of any other colony? He appealed to the official returns of the colonies as showing positive proof to the contrary.

Mr. BAKER: Our production has been greater.

Mr. GREENWOOD: If our production had been greater the facts ought to show it. What was the good of the hon. member's bare assertion without proof? The Minister for Lands moved the second reading of this bill, but he did not adduce a single fact in support of it. He dealt in mere assertions.

Mr. CAMERON: Yours are mere assertions.

Mr. GREENWOOD: Mine are not mere assertions; they are facts.

Mr. HOSKINS: And I advanced arguments.

Mr. GREENWOOD: The hon. member's speech consisted of bare unsupported assertions from beginning to end, and he now called upon the House not to be led away by unsupported assertions. The hon. member for Camden (Mr. Garrett), who was the real advocate of this bill in this House—for the Minister for Lands was merely its apologist—said that all the colonies had imitated the land legislation of New South Wales. He had proved that that was absolutely false in regard to South Australia. And now as to Victoria. Victoria was the daughter of New South Wales, and naturally enough she followed in our wake in regard to free selection before survey. Her law, however, had this provision, that one tenth of the area free selected must be cultivated every year. Cultivation was the very best proof of bona fide settlement, and it represented a genuine improvement of the soil which became permanent settlement. Here, however, the Government professed to give up the conditions of improvement and to have only fencing, and cultivation would not be necessary under the proposed law. The effect of the law in Victoria was, that the settlers in that colony were growing wheat enough to feed the whole population, while in New South Wales we did not grow wheat enough to feed one-half of our population. There was also this important provision in the Land law of Victoria, which we had not, and that was that of the proceeds of the land revenue £200,000, should be annually spent in the construction of railways, or be applied in the payment of debentures for public works. About 17,000,000 acres had been sold under free selection in Victoria, and the effect had been the accumulation of large estates in the hands of a few, to such an extent that the Legislature of that colony had been led to pass one of the most oppressive land tax laws in the world. They divided the land into four classes for the purpose of taxation; but municipal and county property, and less areas than 640 acres, were not taxed. Taking the land that was taxable, there were 202 freeholders in Victoria altogether who owned 4,960,457 acres, and they paid taxes amounting to £116,172 per annum, while the total amount of the land tax was only £151,000. There was proportionately a far larger amount of bona fide settlement in Victoria than in New South Wales, and in New South Wales free selection was working in the direction of creating vast estates, to a ten times greater extent, than it had done in Victoria. Some gentlemen who owned land in Victoria also had runs in New South Wales, and on examination of the official information which he had obtained brought out some startling results. Samuel Wilson, he saw, held 297,440 acres under lease in New South Wales, for which he paid £17,059. In Victoria Samuel Wilson owned 117,452 acres of purchased land, upon which he paid the annual tax of £3428. For the use of his own land this gentleman paid an annual tax of £18 12s. 7d. per square mile in Victoria, while in New South Wales he leased nearly three millions of acres of public lands, on which he only paid a rental of 7s. 7d. per square mile. He did not justify the high land tax in Victoria, but we should be driven to similar legislation by our present system in New South Wales. The next case he would mention was that of the Chirnsides, who rented 667,580 acres in New South Wales for £1155, and they had purchased land in Victoria to the extent of 165,816 acres, for which they paid taxes to the amount of £4913. So that for the use of their own land in Victoria they paid £19 per square mile, while for the use of Crown lands in New South Wales they paid 22s. 2d. per square miles. Then he noticed the name of Isaac Younghusband, who held 504,800 acres in New South Wales, for which he paid £370 a year as rent, while in Victoria he owned 12,036 acres for which he paid £270 per annum as taxes. For the use of the public land in New South Wales he paid 9s. 4d. per square mile, and for his own land in Victoria he paid £14 4s. per square mile, or about thirty times as much in taxes in Victoria as he paid in rent in New South Wales. Another case he would mention was that of Mr. George Armytage, who leased eleven runs, containing 357,335 acres of land in the colony for which he paid £390, or 14s. 6d. per square mile. In Victoria, the same gentleman owned 35,525 acres of land, the taxes on which amounted to £1300, or £23 per square mile. The reason why he had adduced those instances was to show that their land system was not so wonderfully wise and prudent and conducive to the welfare of the people as the hon. member, Mr. Garrett, said it was, and that neither South Australia nor Victoria had copied it in the manner that gentleman said they had. He found that there were seventy families in the colonies who held 1294 runs, with an area of 48,356,318 acres. They were also said to hold purchased land to the extent of 869,603 acres. There were fifteen financial companies hodling 603 runs, comprising 18,922,550 acres. They held 677,485 acres of purchased land. So that eighty-five firms held 1897 runs, comprising 67,278,868, and 1,547,088 acres of purchased land. The rest of the lands leased or purchased consisted of 2375 runs, comprising 67,689,018 acres of leased land, and 4,807,643 acres of purchased land. The total for the colony was 4272 runs, 134,967,886 acres; annual rent, £165,947; purchased land, 6,354,731 acres; rent per square mile, 15s. 8½d.; square miles, 210,887. Did not those figures prove that half the leased lands of the colony was in the hands of 85 firms, who held also a very large proportion of purchased land; and that in legislating for the disposal of Crown lands, they were legislating for the benefit of a very small number of persons, and so depriving the great body of the people of their share in them. The whole area of the colony consisted of 323,437 square miles. The total area leased was 233,732 square miles. The total alienated was 45,312 square miles, and there were 44,393 square miles, which he presumed represented reserves, so that nearly every available acre in New South Wales was either sold or under lease. He thought it would be acknowledged on all hands that it was unfortunate for any country to have its lands held by only a few persons. One of the greatest dangers to the Commonwealth of the United Kingdom sprang from the fact that the lands there were in the hands of a very few persons, and that the great body of the people had no interest in them and were dependent simply on the labour of their hands. He had some figures showing the state of affairs in that respect in England, and he noticed that Earl Derby, he thought, moved for some returns in regard to the freehold list of the United Kingdom. That list took two or three years to prepare, and now it was exceedingly valuable, and he would predict that it would have a tremendous effect upon the future history of the kingdom. It was not his intention to go over that voluminous list in detail, but he had summarised it, and he found that forty-three landholders owned amongst them 8,345,968 acres of land, or an average of 194,000 acres each. He mentioned these figures as a test which they might apply to the results of legislation in the colony, which showed that they were accumulating the lands in the hands of a few to an extent never before equalled in such a short time in the history of the world. He had a return which had been moved for by the Premier, and printed in May, 1878, on the question of what had become of the land selected, and in it was the following letter from Mr. Adams:—

"Surveyor-General's Office, Sydney, 7 August, 1877.—Sir,—It is desired by the Government that reports be obtained upon the present condition of lands under the 13th, 14th, 21st, and 22nd sections of the Alienation Act of 1861, and in this view my attention has been called to the following heads of inquiry, viz.:—First. The proportion of land taken up under those clauses, and actually used in making bona-fide homesteads, either agricultural, pastoral, or of a character embracing both. Secondly. The proportion taken up for speculative purposes, such as selling to advantage after three years' occupation and fulfilling the requirements of the Act. Thirdly. The proportion taken up by persons other than the lessees of Crown lands, on the probability of their interests being purchased by Crown tenants. Fourthly. Proportion taken up by persons acting as dummies for Crown tenants, for the purpose of protecting their runs. Fifthly. The proportion remaining after considering the foregoing questions, with remarks as to its disposal.

"The consideration of the subject may be simplified by adopting an arbitrary number, say, 100,000 acres, as representing the total area alienated in your district under the clauses referred to; and you are at liberty to apply the quantity to the whole, or parts of your district, should it vary in climate or by any other circumstances that render separate consideration necessary; and when such is the case that you will clearly define the geographic limits within which your reports will apply.

"I am, &c., P. F. ADAMS."

Circular issued 10th August, 1877, to District Surveyors.

A German naturalist, Herr Wittmach, has recently been making experiments with the tropical fruit known as the papaw (carica papaya), the juice of which is found to possess the curious property when boiled with tough meat of rendering it tender. If the unripe fruit be placed in the water in which the toughest meat is to be cooked, it is found to effectually soften it and render it perfectly digestible; and the same results are observed if the meat be merely washed with the juice of the fruit. The thick white milky, or rather creamy, juice, when extracted from the unripe papaw, in fact, contains properties similar to those of pepsine, and it is possible that it may be susceptible of chemical preparation and become a valuable medicine.

INDEX TO ADVERTISEMENTS.

The Sydney Morning Herald.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 23.

In the Legislative Council, yesterday,

Mr. Macleay presented a petition signed, on behalf of a large public meeting in Sydney against the Parliamentary Powers and Privileges Bill, and the petition was received.

Sir John Robertson laid on the table abstracts of Crown lands reserved and other documents.

The Patents Law Amendment Bill passed its final stages, and was returned to the Assembly with amendments.

Sir John Robertson moved the House into committee to consider the Assembly's message in reference to the Council's amendments in the Supreme Court (Additional Judge) Bill.

Mr. Charles Campbell said that, in order to remove objections to this motion, some good reasons should be urged.

Sir John Robertson said it might be presumed that certain proposals having been made by the other Chamber, a sufficient reason was given for the Council to go into committee to consider them.

The motion was agreed to, and the House went into committee.

Sir John Robertson moved that the committee do not insist on the Council's amendments in the first and sixth clauses, expunging the provisions as to the eligibility of attorneys and solicitors for appointment as additional Judges, which amendments were disagreed from by the Assembly.

The motion was opposed by Mr. Dalley, Mr. Darley, Mr. Foster, and supported by Mr. Samuel, Mr. A. Campbell, and Professor Smith.

The motion was negatived on division by a majority of 13 to 9.

The Chairman reported to the House that the committee insisted on its amendments disagreed from by the Assembly, and the adoption of the report was fixed an order of the day for this day (Wednesday).

The House proceeded to the resumption of the debate on the motion of Sir John Robertson, that the Chinese Immigration Regulation Bill be now read a second time, upon which Mr. Holt had moved as an amendment, that the bill be read the second time this day six months.

The bill was opposed by Mr. Docker, Professor Smith, Mr. Gordon, Mr. A. Campbell, Mr. G. H. Cox, and Mr. J. Campbell. Sir John Robertson replied, and the question was put, when the amendment was carried by a majority of 14 to 5.

On the motion for the adoption of the report from the Committee of the Whole on the Customs Regulation Bill, Mr. Samuel moved as an amendment that the bill be re-committed with a view to consider certain of the clauses.

The amendment being agreed to, the House went into committee. New clauses were substituted for clauses 1 and 2. A number of other clauses were amended, but with little substantial alteration of their provisions. The bill was reported with further amendments, and the adoption of the report was fixed an order of the day for this day (Wednesday).

The House adjourned at 25 minutes past 10 o'clock to this day (Wednesday).

In the Legislative Assembly, yesterday,

Questions were asked by Messrs. Garrett, Onslow, Burns, Cameron, M'Elhone, Bennett, Greenwood, Dangar, and Thompson, and answered by Ministers.

On the motion of Captain Onslow, papers were ordered respecting the Police Magistrate at Wagga Wagga; on Mr. Cameron's motion, papers respecting the Wallsend Colliery; on Mr. Greenwood's motion, papers respecting Denominational school teachers and house rent.

Dr. Bowker moved for leave to bring in a bill dealing with the qualifications of medical practitioners. He had taken a deep interest in the question for many years, and had written to the Herald respecting it nearly thirty years ago. In New South Wales more than 12,000 persons died annually under the care of medical practitioners. There was great variety of opinion in regard to medical science, but still there was such a thing as medical science, and transgression of its principles was fraught with evil to the public. In regard to medical matters there was no such thing as a divine insight, all knowledge was acquired, although one man might have a greater natural aptitude than another. The public were being deceived by ignorant charlatans, and the bill he proposed to introduce would tend to lessen this evil.

Captain Onslow said that what the country wanted was a measure for the protection of the public against charlatans and quacks. He had carried a resolution which would have that effect, but Government had taken no notice of it. The public were tricked out of their money under all sorts of pretexts, and he thought they ought to be protected against abuses of this kind. He had great pleasure in seconding the motion.

Mr. M'Elhone asked what course the Government would take in regard to this bill. If there were to be restrictions in regard to barristers and questions of law why not in regard to the health and lives of the people. Charlatans made large fortunes out of the credulity of the people. He instanced the case of Dr. Van Heckeran, who, in his opinion, simply lived upon the vices of the people. If this bill would put an end to such abominations, he would support it. Dr. On the also was one of the men who lived upon the imagination of the public.

Mr. Greenwood did not think that this question could be dealt with this session. He agreed in its object, but he doubted whether it was wise to attempt the impossible. The Attorney-General had objected to the motion, and perhaps for that reason it was desirable to have an expression of opinion from the House. The public ought to be protected against charlatans, and he should like to know why they opposed this motion?

Dr. Bowker replied, and the motion was agreed to.

Captain Onslow moved for leave to bring in a bill validating all Crown grants to which the Governor had affixed a stamp instead of his sign manual.

Mr. Windeyer said that the present practice was simply to permit his Excellency himself to affix the sign manual to public documents, and not permit other persons to do so.

Mr. M'Elhone moved for copies of all correspondence and minutes in reference to the case of Henry James Greville.

Mr. F. Suttor said the Government had no objection to the motion, and it was agreed to without division.

Mr. M'Elhone moved a resolution to the effect that the decision of several Ministers to allow Mr. Donnelly to purchase 490 acres out of a reserve on a common near Wagga Wagga was wrong, and ought to be reversed.

Mr. Hoskins moved the adjournment of the debate on this question, as the documents had not yet been printed.

After debate by Messrs. Greenwood, Garrett, and M'Elhone, the adjournment of the debate was agreed to.

Mr. M'Elhone moved for returns respecting bridges, culverts, and waterways on the Wagga Wagga railway extension. After debate the motion was withdrawn.

Mr. Greenwood resumed the debate on the second reading of the Land Bill. He said the Government had promised to bring in a comprehensive measure, and he quoted from the speeches of the Premier and the Minister for Lands in proof of that. But the member for Camden, Mr. Garrett, seemed to know the intentions of Ministers better than they did themselves, and argued against waiting for comprehensive legislation as impracticable. What made legislation on any subject impracticable, except the opposition of leading members, such as the member for Camden. An appeal to the constituencies on any leading question was perfectly legitimate, for the very reason that the Assembly was a representative institution; and if this bill were not passed now, he doubted whether it would ever be passed at all. It had been said that all the colonies had imitated the land legislation of New South Wales. He quoted from the South Australian Land Act of 1877 to show that free selection before survey was not permitted there, and gave official figures to prove that the export of wool, minerals, and breadstuffs had been greater pro rata to population for the last twenty years both in South Australia and Victoria than in New South Wales. Then the Victorian Land Act provided that one-tenth of the area free-selected must be annually cultivated, and yet that Act had concentrated land in the hands of a few to such an extent that an oppressive land tax had been imposed for the purpose of bursting up the big estates, and not for the sake of revenue. He quoted statistics to show that about 203 persons in Victoria owned each an average of 35,000, and paid nine-tenths of the land-tax of that colony, or altogether £116,000. Sir Samuel Wilson had 117,000 acres in Victoria of purchased land, on which he paid a tax of £19 per square mile; and in New South Wales he held nearly three million acres of Crown lands under pastoral lease, at an average of about 7s. per square mile. He gave several other similar instances the effect being to show that there was a greater accumulation of land in the hands of a few in New South Wales than in Victoria. About eighty-five firms held 67,300,000 acres under pastoral lease, and the rest of the leaseholders of the colony held only 67,600,000. He referred to the return of freeholders in the United Kingdom, obtained by the late Earl of Derby, as illustrating the tendency of land legislation in England, and also to the land systems of France and other countries. Coming to the particulars of the bill, he objected to the reduction in the value of improvements, and still more to the proposition to make this provision retrospective for more than half the whole area free-selected during the seventeen years' operation of the present land law. He moved an amendment to the effect that the House while willing to redress any grievances that might have arisen, declined to legislate further on this question until furnished with authentic information as to the disposition of the 29,000,000 acres of purchased land and the 150,000,000 acres of land reported as under various forms of lease.

Mr. M'Elhone believed that, if ever there was a party vote in that House, it was the vote which turned out the late Government on their Land Bill. What had been gained by it? Here was a worse bill, and for every honest selector who would benefit by it, there would be ten dummy and black-mail selectors who would benefit still more. Yet for the benefit of those few, he would agree to go into committee on this bill. He was astonished that the member for Camden said South Australia had adopted our land system. The member for East Sydney had proved the contrary. Our law did not settle people upon the land, but rather drove them off. He hoped several most important amendments would be made in committee.

Mr. Garrett wished to refer to the documents quoted by the member for East Sydney. The return moved for by Sir Henry Parkes contained the answer to the objections made by the honorable member. Monaro was the hot-bed of dummyism, and there the surveyor reported only one-half the selections as dummy selections. In the Bega district 95 per cent. of the whole were reported as bona fide. In other districts the surveyors' reports were to the same effect. He argued that cultivation was being carried on now in new districts, and that proved the bona fides of settlement. He admitted that the law was defective, but it had done more good than harm. The land which would grow wheat now was too far from a market to pay, but it could be made more profitable in growing wool and meat, for which a large area was necessary. He agreed that there was an enormous monopoly of land in this colony in the hands of a few; but the remedy was to extend the principles of the Act of 1861.

Mr. Murphy regretted that the Government had not introduced a comprehensive measure. They could not claim any originality in regard to this measure, for it was a bill of shreds and patches taken from the late Government. Was this the result of our change of Administration? He approved of the reduction of the value of improvements, as it required very little more to improve 640 acres than it did to improve 320 acres. The most valuable improvement was fencing. The Land Acts were not in themselves bad, the evil was in the administration. The rents paid by the lessees were far too low and ought to be increased. He moved the adjournment of the debate.

After discussion by Sir Henry Parkes, and Messrs. Fitzpatrick, Barbour, Greenwood, J. Davies, W. Suttor, Dillon, Thompson, and W. Davies,

The House went into Committee of Supply resuming with Harbours and Rivers, page 107. After debate by Messrs. Cohen, Greenwood, Fitzpatrick, Lackey, M'Elhone, Driver, W. Davies, Stuart, Webb, Jacob, Badgery, Rosbey, Shepherd, R. B. Smith, and Sir Henry Parkes, the sum of £207 was voted for miscellaneous expenses, and £12,403 for the Colonial Architect.

Progress was reported, and the House adjourned at twenty minutes past 2 until 4 o'clock to-day.

Stonewalling is a bad practice, but the majority in the Assembly who, on Friday last, were defeated by it in their endeavour to carry the Mudgee Turf Club Bill would have improved their case had they met the arguments of their opponents with argument, instead of falling back upon the mere exercise of the power of voting. The minority were really contending for a principle of considerable importance, which is worthy of more careful discussion than it has yet undergone at the hands of Parliament. It has been admitted both by the expressed opinions of the Legislature and the action of the Executive, that it is for the public interest to set aside areas of Crown land in the neighbourhood of centres of population for purposes of public recreation. It is acknowledged on all sides that amongst the means of public recreation are included provision for the pursuit of various forms of sport. The sports of the people have won recognition by the State, and where grants of land have been made, that recognition has taken the form of substantial aid. The question then arises, whether the State would not do well in granting aid to reserve to itself a right of control. The objections urged against the Mudgee Turf Club Bill amounted to this, that the bill would have the effect of converting a portion of a public reserve into what would be to almost all intents and purposes the private property of the club in question.

The doctrine that all parts of a public recreation ground should be at all times open free of charge to everybody, and that everybody should have both the right of free access and the right to do what he sees fit, is untenable. Unless sports of all kinds be excluded from places of public recreation, and if portions of public recreation grounds are to be prepared and maintained for the pursuit of any particular sports, there must be a power of control somewhere to make these preparations, and to prevent acts of mischief or obstruction. If there is to be a racecourse, the ground must be made and kept suitable for racing; and the same thing is obvious in the case of cricket. But this cannot be done without in some degree restricting liberty of access. Again, these preparations cannot be made and kept up efficiently without expenditure; and if the funds are not provided by grants of public money or subscriptions, the authorities must have power to make charges for admission. There can be no public racecourses, cricket grounds, or other places of sport, except upon these conditions. It may not be necessary that the public should be excluded at all times; but it is necessary that there should be such a power to exclude at special times, and to raise revenue from admissions as would provide funds for preparation and maintenance, and prevent the general purpose being defeated.

But, admitting all this, it does not follow that any portion of a public recreation ground which is devoted to the purposes of a particular sport should be allowed to become virtually private property. On the contrary, the step that ought to be taken is to bring all such places, in a certain degree, under the special control of the State. Public sports are carried on in the presence of large gatherings of people. There is year by year an increasing tendency in this direction. The growing love of sport, the abundant facilities for its encouragement, the recurrence of intercolonial and international contests, combine to render it more and more important as time passes by that these gatherings should be held in public places, under the supervision of public authority, and under regulations that have the force of public law. The observance of these conditions is desirable, if not necessary, for the preservation of order and the peace. Where only private regulations prevail, peace and order are preserved chiefly, if not wholly, by the influence of a general feeling in favour of fair play. But the existence or the force of that feeling cannot be always trusted to safely. A dispute may occur and scatter it to the winds. A breach of fair play, real or imaginary, on the part of the performers may be sufficient to destroy self-control on the part of the spectators, and in the supposed interests of fair play all chance of securing it may be destroyed by the interference of an excited mob. What is required is the interposition of regulations with all the force of law, the breach of which would render anybody liable to immediate arrest and, on conviction, summary punishment. Let a cricket match be held, for instance, on a public ground, and let a regulation, with the force of law, provide that, after the ringing of a bell, everybody passing within the fence and on the ground reserved for the players should be liable to be taken into custody. Such a disturbance as that which disgraced the metropolis during the stay of Lord Harris's team in Sydney, could then be readily prevented; and after a little experience in the enforcement of such conditions, no one would dream of attempting to rush the players. In the absence of such powers the police are likely to be most helpless at the time when their services are most wanted. How the influence of authority may be made to tell in connection with public sports was shown the other day in the case of the boat race on the Parramatta River. The race was pulled on a public highway, the control of which was vested in the Marine Board. The Marine Board published regulations for the maintenance of order and fair-play, and the preservation of the public safety, and had power and the will to enforce them. The result was that, notwithstanding the keenness of the competition, and the lively interest felt in the issue, there was no interference and no disorder; although, probably, had the matter been in private hands, there would have been crowding, confusion, dispute, and loss of life. It would be a sound principle that, wherever large gatherings of people are permitted to witness sportive contests which involve strong interest and excited feeling, the constituted authorities should, in some such way as is here indicated, have the power of exercising a special control, whether the struggle take place upon public ground or private. But when public lands are granted, and set apart for such purposes, the least that the State should do in return for its liberality is to accompany the grant by some such conditions, and to insist upon their enforcement.

"Shall we give up Greek?" is a question which Mr. E. A. Freeman asks, and answers in the negative, in the Fortnightly Review. He has been moved to discuss this question by the fact that in the University of Cambridge it has recently been seriously proposed that the demand for Greek should be mitigated. Mr. Freeman apologises for saying nothing new on the subject. The controversy, he says, has its cycles; it comes up and it goes to sleep again. Certain arguments are presented, they receive an answer, and the discussion dies away. When therefore, after an interval of a few years, the same objections are revived, there is nothing for it but to give the same reply, and with the same result; and therefore it is that he says over his signature just what he had said anonymously eight years ago. This line of remark shows that a very learned historian, though very skilful in tracing the causes and effects of social and political movements in past days, may be unable to read the signs of his own times. The reason why the arguments come up again periodically, in the way that so astonishes Mr. Freeman, is that they are born of the felt necessities of the age; and his mistake is in supposing that his arguments in reply have slain them.

The fact is that education is taking a much wider range now than it did when the course of University studies was originally marked out. More people are now receiving a primary education, more people are receiving a good secondary education, and more are requiring a taste for the higher education. But with the multiplicity of students comes a multiplicity of aims. It is not merely those who are aiming at the learned professions, or the fortunate sons of wealth, who desire to profit by University culture and University degrees. There is a much greater variety in the occupations of modern than of mediæval life, and a larger number of persons to whom a University course will be an advantage as well as an adornment. And the variation in the uses to which University teaching may be put, gives rise to some variation in the demand for the teaching itself.

Apart from this, knowledge itself has expanded. The things to be learnt are becoming more numerous; so numerous, indeed, that human life is not long enough to compass them all. This is especially the case with science in its many applications. The consequence is, that those who wish to know, wish the Universities to teach what they desire to learn, and desire also that the great schools of learning should give their academic certificates of proficiency for the new as well as for the old scholarship. It is natural enough that the professors of science should be leaders of this movement. It is to be expected that they should magnify their office, and should claim for proficiency in the studies they teach a merit equal to what is claimed for the same degree of successful labour in the acquisition of dead languages. But it is not only the teachers in science or the pupils in science who press this demand. It has been taken up very largely as a middle-class question. Not a few classical scholars have admitted its reasonableness, and in several cases University authorities themselves have felt, that if the important institutions they manage are not to lose their hold upon the active portion of modern society, they must widen the curriculum.

The question which Mr. FREEMAN puts, namely, "Shall we give up Greek," is not quite a fair statement of the question, which is, shall Greek be made compulsory or optional for University students? There is no question at all of giving up Greek, or condemning it as a study. Now and again, in the heat of controversy, some disputant, irritated by the idolatrous extravagance with which the study of Greek is recommended, will deny its value altogether. But scholars take no note of what is really a counter extravagance. Greek literature and Greek art have long ago taken their place, and they are not likely to be deposed. Nothing can make them less than they are absolutely, and they can only be made relatively less by being surpassed. Till that happens the admirers of Greek may be easy.

But without any talk of underrating Greek, or giving it up, there is and must of necessity be talk as to the number of students on whom the study of Greek ought to be made compulsory. Those who have the leisure for it, and to whose future life it is adapted, are not likely to have less opportunities than heretofore for its acquisition. Classical scholarship is not likely to die out of the land or to become less appreciated because unwilling students are no longer forced to give to classics time which they would rather give to other studies. Greek scholarship will be as honoured, as useful, and probably as rewarded when Greek is only studied by those who desire to know it, as when forced on those who grudge the time they are compelled to give to it.

Mr. FREEMAN says that the Cambridge argument against Greek is that the little that is learned is not worth the labour, as it produces no valuable results; and he considers that this argument is answered by saying, "Then learn more and make it worth the while." But time is an essential element in this question. To learn Greek enough thoroughly to enjoy its masterpieces, requires a large amount of study, and this demand on the scholastic period of life is precisely the difficulty that has to be met. It is because learning a little is of very little use, and learning it thoroughly takes a great deal of time, that those whose time is precious and to whom Greek is of no distinct utility, beg to be excused. Assuming the Cambridge argument to state a matter of fact, namely, that the amount of Greek at present required is too small to be in itself really useful, then it is obvious that the argument that is based on the definition of a liberal education does not apply. To study and enjoy the masterpieces of literature, in whatever language they may be written, is liberalising to the mind. But to struggle with the accidence of a dead language, to learn some grammatical rules, to do a few exercises, and with the aid of a crib to struggle through the translation of a single book, is not a liberal education. An education is not liberal unless it cultivates, refines, and expands the mind; unless it elevates the taste, brings the mind of the learner into fertile communion with greater minds, and creates a passion for knowledge and an appreciation of the forms in which it can be conveyed.

Mr. FREEMAN, while defending the continued study of Greek as properly compulsory on University students, makes two admissions, which, if pressed by his antagonists, would go a long way towards giving them the victory; for he admits that the mode in which it has been taught is very defective, and has had something to do with bringing it into disrepute. He condemns the attempt to produce an Augustan age of Greek literature, contends for a much wider range of reading, and the introduction of much more comparative philology. But this is only to make the study more engrossing both of time and of labour. It would no doubt make it more interesting and more profitable, but it would still more displace those other studies that are so imperiously pressing their claims. His second admission is that if either Greek or Latin has to go, it must be Greek. He says this "with all sorrow, as one who has throughout life felt Greek to be something good in itself, and Latin only a necessary evil." But western Europe is the heir of a Latin and not of a Greek world. In race, in laws, in language, in politics, the Romans have their heirs in the nations of modern Europe; the Greeks have only themselves, and they are in a corner, though with a possible but yet doubtful future.

In February last, Mr. GOSCHEN asked the CHANCELLOR OF THE EXCHEQUER whether the Government would promise not to alter the regulations affecting currency in India before Parliament had discussed any proposed change. Sir STAFFORD NORTHCOTE, in reply, refused to give the required pledge, inasmuch as the Indian Coinage Act vested full power over the matter in the Governor-General in Council; but promised that if any large change were adopted "while Parliament was sitting," the House of Commons should have an opportunity of discussing it before it was finally settled. The financial situation in India, owing to the depreciation in silver, appears to be becoming every day more desperate, and from the above, as well as from some other Ministerial utterances, it appears not impossible that Lord LYTTON may be permitted to apply the doubtful remedy of introducing gold coinage. If Indian finance alone had to be considered, that remedy would probably be the true one; but the effect of the step on the commercial condition of their own country and of the rest of the civilized world must surely count for something in the calculations of British statesmen. Another great absorption of gold would probably lead to a further fall in prices. Silver has so fallen in value as to make it less suitable for coinage, and as seriously to embarrass a country which like India has silver for its legal standard. Gold, however, is rising in price, and notwithstanding the large quantities produced, is still in eager demand. The world would be accommodated just now if the big bonanzas of the Comstock lode would give out for a while, and if some new and productive diggings could be developed in Australia. With a double standard, it is necessary to have the two precious metals kept at a proportionate value. But with silver going down, and gold going up, there is a double disturbance of the equilibrium.

Prince LEOPOLD's speech on National Education at the Mansion House, on the 19th February, shows him to have inherited a very fair share of his distinguished father's power of thought and aptitude for literary culture. "His panegyric on Professor RUSKIN (says a contemporary), and especially on his teaching, 'that the greatness of a nation must be measured not by her wealth, or her apparent power, but by the degree in which all her people have learned to gather from the world of books, of art, of nature, a pure and an ennobling joy;' his fine and true remark that in providing teachers who are so far wasted that they know a great deal more than they will, for a long time to come, have any chance of teaching, we shall yet be great gainers, because 'what they do teach will be better taught for the reserve of knowledge behind,—the methods will be sounder, the personal influence of the lecturer will be more stimulating to his class;' and lastly, his admirable appreciation both of the difficulty of getting up local enthusiasm in so huge a capital as London, and nevertheless of the power and pride inherent in the Londoner's sense that he is the citizen 'of no mean city,'—all showed Prince LEOPOLD to be capable of genuine efforts of oratory, such as would place him high even among the public speakers of the day." Those who look to current political transactions merely, frequently fail to recognize how important factors the Crown and the Royal Family are in our national lives. The vitality and unity of the nation is secured by and bound up with sentiments of loyal and justifiable regard to them, and whatever tends to make these sentiments warmer and more enthusiastic is a matter for national congratulation. This the appearance on the scene of a Prince, eloquent, philanthropic, and cultivated, can hardly fail to do. Already a portion of the English Press which discerns the qualities of Prince LEOPOLD is speculating to what account Lord BEACONSFIELD—bent as he ever is on cementing the ties between "the monarch and the multitude"—will turn the talents of the highly placed young statesman. A royal daughter has been sent to Canada; could a better sphere be found for a royal son than Australia? The health of Prince LEOPOLD is said to be delicate, and in that case a sojourn in the mild climate of this part of the world would be a physical benefit and enjoyment.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE news from Russia, which we publish in our cable message of this morning, is of very grave import. The repressive measures of the Czar, by which he hoped to overawe his subjects, have brought about a result very different to that intended. Russian loyalty refuses to be warmed or stimulated by cruelty and oppression. Serious riots, during which great excesses were committed, have occurred at Rostof, on Lake Nero, and were only quelled by the soldiery. And the whole of Russia may now, our message adds, be said to be virtually in a state of siege. The course of events in the greatest empire of the world will be watched with some interest for the next few weeks or months.

A VERY numerously signed petition has been addressed to his Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor, by residents of Campbelltown, praying that that township and immediate district be constituted a municipality. The area of the proposed municipality is about fourteen square miles. It has long been thought discreditable that a township of such importance as Campbelltown, situated as it is in the centre of a very fertile and beautiful district, should be without the benefits which municipal incorporation would afford. After the railway was constructed the business of the place decreased considerably; but latterly there have not been wanting signs of a recovery from its prostration, the same as with Parramatta. And if the township were improved by municipal works, there can be little doubt that it would prove a very attractive occasional resort of residents of the metropolis, and it would prove a spur to further advancement in other ways. The petition referred to is published in yesterday's Government Gazette.

MR. BAKER's bill for the abolition of the duty on gold repeals Acts 20 Vic., No. 17, and 26 Vic., No. 5; and it is intended that it shall, if passed, come into operation on the 1st of July next.

LAST night it was reported that seven or eight cows, in a more wretched condition than the animal described in one of the articles that recently appeared in the Herald upon the condition of the Abattoirs, were in the pens at Glebe Island, and had been there since 8 o'clock on Sunday morning last, without any food. They were intended for slaughter this morning, and in order that they might be seen by somebody not connected with the Abattoirs before they were killed, the Inspector of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals was informed of the state the animals were in, so that he might see them at an early hour to-day. Some of the cows had calves with them when brought to the pens. We are informed also that last Sunday one of the pens in which the pigs are kept was in a condition far worse than anything written about these pens has indicated. One of the pigs killed on Monday was a sow that had had a litter of young ones shortly before—a not at all uncommon occurrence.

THE annual meeting of members of the Australian Mutual Provident Society will be held in the Chamber of Commerce at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

THE Commissioner for Railways announces that tickets at excursion fares will be issued on the 29th and 30th instant and 1st May, for Bathurst, on the occasion of the races, the tickets to be available for one week.

AMONG the multifarious duties which Colonel Anderson, C.M.G. (and some of the Victorian officers) has performed on behalf of his Government during his stay in Sydney has been the inspection of the military drill imparted in our Public schools. To assist Colonel Anderson in this matter, Major Parnell and Major Trythall, head masters of associated training schools in Victoria, have, by request of the Victorian commandant, paid official visits to some of our Public schools. They have visited the school at Crown-street (Mr. M'Cormack), and at Burwood (Mr. M'Creadie); and also inspected the drill in addition to the internal management at the Cleveland-street school (Mr. Finigan), at all of which they expressed themselves as very highly pleased at what they witnessed. Yesterday Colonel Anderson, attended by Lieutenant Williams, also Majors Parnell and Trythall, accompanied by Captain Blannin, visited the Upper Fort-street school (Mr. Johnson), and the establishment underwent a searching examination. Mr. Wright, superintendent of the training institute, kindly afforded the visitors all the information at his disposal. At the termination of the visit Colonel Anderson, in a short speech, assured the teachers and scholars that he had received much pleasure from what had been brought under his notice. In the afternoon the office of the Council of Education was visited, when Mr. Wilkins gave them a large amount of information touching our school system. We understand that other schools are to be visited, and a report thereon furnished to the Victorian Government. Majors Parnell and Trythall and Captain Blannin will return to Melbourne on Thursday, overland. Colonel Anderson will remain in Sydney some days longer.

THE Bishop of Sydney and Mrs. Barker leave town to-day, and will be absent for three weeks.

A GOOD deal of inconvenience was caused yesterday afternoon by the want of magistrates in the Water Police Charge Court. One man, who was charged with assault, and who ultimately received a sentence of three days' imprisonment, was kept waiting in the dock from 2 o'clock until nearly 4, because there were not magistrates to try his case. Mr. Hunt attended, but one magistrate not being able to deal with an assault case, that gentleman was unable to do anything until the arrival of a brother magistrate. What made the delay more annoying was the fact that in the magistrates' room adjoining the Charge Court five Justices were present engaged on a tenement case, and none of them could or would go into the Charge Court for the few minutes which it required to dispose of the only case on the sheet. Eventually two of them did take their seats in the Charge Court, but not until nearly 4 o'clock.

OUR obituary notices on Monday announced the death of Mr. Henry Wilfred Ellis, barrister-at-law, at Camden Cottage, Cook's River Road, at the age of 58 years. The Newcastle Herald thus refers to the late Mr. Ellis:—"The deceased gentleman was formerly intimately connected with the welfare and progress of this district, having been editor of the Northern Times and Newcastle Telegraph, about twenty years ago. For several years also he acted as Crown Prosecutor for the Northern district, and on occasions filled the position of acting Judge. He formerly resided at East Maitland."

THE general meeting of the Redfern Football Club was held in the Town Hall, Redfern, on Friday evening. There was a large attendance of members, Mr. Coghlan occupying the chair. The report for last year having been read was deemed very satisfactory. The club had laboured under many disadvantages, principal among which were, holding its meeting too late to be represented at the Union, thereby preventing arrangement of matches, and an uncertainty which existed among members in the early part of the season whether the club had a playing ground. Notwithstanding these drawbacks the club had pulled through the majority of its matches victoriously, and towards the end of the season its ranks had been largely augmented. The coming season promises to be much more successful, as the club will labour under none of these hindrances. The report, with the treasurer's balance-sheet, which showed a small sum in hand, was adopted. The meeting then proceeded to elect officers for the ensuing year, with the following results:—Vice-presidents, Messrs. T. Coglan, and J. Mulcahy; secretary, Mr. J. J. Allen; treasurer, Mr. H. Payten; general committee, Messrs. Williamson, M'Laughlan, Brown, Mulcahy, and Inglis; delegates to the Rugby Union, the secretary, and Mr. John Mulcahy. Several other matters were discussed during the evening, among others country matches, new rules, &c. After the names of twelve new members had been handed in, and a scratch match arranged for Saturday, the meeting terminated.

AT the election which took place yesterday, to fill the vacancy in the directory of the City Mutual Fire Insurance Company, Mr. P. Hogan, J.P., was the successful candidate, and was declared duly elected.

A FATAL accident occurred at the Exhibition-building last night to one of the workmen, named Samuel Allen, 24 years of age. Allen was engaged between 8 and 9 o'clock on the framework of the building, at a height of about twenty feet from the ground, when he somehow lost his balance and fell. His head struck with great force against a piece of timber. His skull was fractured, and he was otherwise injured internally. He was taken to the Infirmary and immediately put under medical care, but his injuries were too serious to admit of the possibility of his recovering, and he died about an hour after the accident.

THE half-yearly meeting of the Civil Service Co-operative Society, adjourned from the 31st March was held on the 10th instant, at St. James's School-room, in Castlereagh-street. Mr. A. C. Fraser occupied the chair, and there was an attendance of about 30 shareholders. The report for the term stated that, owing to a heavy loss sustained by the Newcastle branch, the business of which has been gradually decreasing, the balance-sheet shows a net deficiency of £125 3s. 9d. The falling off in the business of the Newcastle store has for some time been under the consideration of the directors; and although they have been unwilling to close the branch so long as any probability of its recovering itself remained, now that affairs have reached their present state they are of opinion that the society will benefit by the closing of that store. The operations of the Sydney branch were of a most satisfactory nature, the gross profits for the half-year being £2330 6s. 6d., the receipts being £18,022 15s. 2d. On the motion of the chairman, the report, together with the balance-sheet duly audited, was adopted. A dividend, at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum on the paid-up capital, out of the reserve fund, was declared. The auditors' fees were fixed at £10 10s. each, as before. A vote of thanks to the chairman closed the meeting.

THE second practice of the Sacred Choral Association took place at the St. James's schoolrooms on Monday night, with a full attendance of those ladies and gentlemen who had already enrolled themselves, and with a very large accession of new members. The association now numbers a chorus of upwards of 250 efficient voices, and seems fairly launched with every prospect of successfully carrying out the special objects of its institution. In order to meet the convenience of many members residing in the suburbs and dependent on trains and omnibuses leaving town before 10 o'clock p.m., it has been arranged to commence practice in future at half-past 7 o'clock punctually, and to close at half-past 9 o'clock. The last practice consisted of Handel's "Messiah," and "Israel in Egypt," under the conductorship of Mr. Packer and Mr. Stanley respectively; and although the choruses lacked the precision only obtainable by constant practice together, there was undoubted evidence of the proficiency and earnestness of all present to do justice to the composer.

A CITIZEN writes:—"Strolling through the Botanic Gardens last week it struck me that the present time presents a good opportunity to remedy their narrowness on the western side, by extending them up to the front of the Exhibition-building and Government House, privacy being secured to the latter by an ornamental fence and shrubbery running from the Governor's gate to the stables, and thence north to Fort Macquarie, passing at a distance of say forty yards east from Government House, a private wicket being placed there for vice-regal use. The interregnum between the Governor's departure and the arrival of his successor affords an opportunity unlikely to occur for years, and the incoming Governor would not be thereby deprived of any privilege he had enjoyed by the extension suggested, whilst the public advantage would be materially increased. During the continuance of the Exhibition a temporary fence could be run from the Governor's stables southerly, to fence off the grounds from the public gardens."

ON the passage of the Ellora with immigrants from the old country recently arrived, a concert was given for the interest of all, and a small collection made on the occasion for bestowment on churches in connection with their adopted country. The sum realized was £1 6s., and its disposal was placed in the hands of the proprietors of this paper, who have placed the money to the credit of the Sydney Bethel Union.

THE German Club of Sydney has prepared an address for presentation to the Emperor and Empress of Germany on the occasion of their golden wedding. The address is to be forwarded by the mail which leaves to-morrow. It expresses the sympathy of the members of the club with the far-off "fatherland," and their gratification that the Emperor William and the Empress Augusta have been spared to witness such a period of their lives as their golden wedding. They express the ardent hope that the Almighty may mercifully spare the Emperor and Empress, and the Royal family, long to rule wisely over the fatherland. In commemoration of their Majesties' golden wedding, the address goes on to say that the Germans of Sydney desire to inform them that in accordance with their Royal wishes to befriend their poor countrymen, they have formed and established a society for that purpose, and have styled it the "Kaiser-Wilhelm Relief." The address has been beautifully mounted and illuminated by Mr. Max Meyer, of Park-street. It is executed in what is known as the ornate Byzantine style. It is elliptic in form, the writing being in letters of gold. The address is supported by the German Imperial arms and national colours, the bordering being red, white, and black. In the centre of the border are two pictures, showing the North and South Heads of Port Jackson, together with the Australian arms. The whole forms a pretty piece of artistic work. It will be on view at Cole's, bookseller, to-day.

AT a meeting of the Sydney Grammar School Rowing Club, held at the Grammar School, under the presidency of Mr. A. B. Weigall, a challenge was read from the honorary secretary of the Geelong Grammar School Rowing Club for a race between the two schools in July next. It was unanimously resolved that the honorary secretary be directed to accept the challenge on behalf of the school; and it was further determined that on account of the expense attending the purchase of a new gig, to be used in the race, the co-operation of ex-students, parents, and others interested in the progress of bodily as well as intellectual exercise should be invited. Mr. Clark, the well-known captain of the Sydney Rowing Club, has kindly volunteered his assistance in getting the crew into form for the race.

THE INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION.

The Executive Commissioner (Mr. P. A. Jennings) received a telegram yesterday morning from New Zealand, stating that his Excellency Sir Hercules Robinson had assumed the presidency of the New Zealand Commission. The New Zealand Commission have made a request to be permitted to lay down artificial Caithness flagging as an exhibit, to form the flooring of the vestibule of the main entrance to the Exhibition building. The subject has been referred to the Colonial Architect for his consideration.

The Committee on Art visited the building yesterday to make a preliminary examination as to the suitability of the southern galleries for the art collection.

We learn from the Executive Commissioner that private letters from London, which have been shown to him, state that in point of number and character, the exhibits to be sent from Great Britain, with the exception, perhaps, of fine arts, will surpass the exhibits sent either to Philadelphia or Paris. Whatever deficiency there may be in regard to the fine arts will be amply supplied by the splendid loan collection which is being prepared for the Commission.

The Hon. J. J. Casey, the Victorian Executive Commissioner, is making arrangements to get the Nelson training ship for bringing the Victorian exhibits and Commissioners to Sydney, in order, as he expresses it in a letter to Mr. Jennings, to do us as much honour as possible. Applications for a further supply of coloured lithographed plans and programmes, have been made on behalf of the Victorian Commission. It is also suggested that our Executive Commissioner should confer with the Victorian Commission on subjects which affect both the Melbourne and Sydney International Exhibition, and which might be mutually beneficial to both undertakings.

The resolution passed at the last meeting of the Commission, with regard to telegraphing to the United States and to Japan, inviting the official co-operation of those countries, has been communicated to the Government, and we understand that telegrams have either been sent, or that they will be sent immediately in accordance with the expressed wish of the Commission.

The Executive Commissioner has had an interview with the Colonial Secretary in reference to a matter which was also the subject of a resolution at the last meeting of the Commission, namely, the urgent necessity for proceeding to erect the exterior buildings for live stock, machinery, &c., and he hopes to be able to report to the next meeting of the Commission that the matter has been definitely settled.

Mr. Alexander, of Goulburn, has written, offering to present the Commissioners with four tame black swans for the Exhibition, to be afterwards handed over to the public gardens. These swans would add greatly to the attraction of the ornamental ponds, which are to be made on the eastern side of the building.

Dr. Roberts has made a suggestion to the Commission to the effect that they should endeavour to procure, for scientific and educational purposes, a collection of weapons, implements, utensils, and houses, illustrative of the habits and customs of the natives of Australia, New Guinea, and the South Sea Islands. A proposal has also been received from Mr. Heath, of Melbourne, offering to construct an aquarium, within the Exhibition grounds, for the Commission. These two proposals have been referred to a committee for consideration, and a report upon them will probably be received at the next meeting of the Commission.

Applications have been received from the Cape of Good Hope for space to exhibit working models of locomotives, stationary, and marine engines; also tools, filters, typeframes, fire extinguishers, and various useful articles and implements for farming and agricultural purposes. Space is also asked for a trophy of Zulu and Kaffir assegais, war-spears, ostrich feathers, and Kaffir curios.

Marcus Ward and Co., of Belfast, the celebrated fancy stationery manufacturers, are sending out thirteen cases of exhibits of fancy printed stationery for exhibition.

The committee on mining, metallurgy, and their products—to which has been allotted the task of securing a collection of exhibits, showing the extent and value of the mineral resources of this colony, and the apparatus and methods now in use in the various mining districts for extracting and treating auriferous and other ores, together with the latest inventions and improvements—in a recently published circular invites the cordial co-operation of companies and private individuals in endeavouring to make the Exhibition worthy of New South Wales. Attention is directed to the importance of collecting and exhibiting samples of the various metalliferous ores, and also of all the waste products from the extractive processes, with a view to the introduction of improved methods and appliances for the treatment of, or the creation of a market for the sale of, such products. Samples of waste products are invited in quantities of not less than 1 cwt. each, but larger if practicable. Recognising the value of making known to the world the vast extent of our coal resources, the committee urges upon the proprietors of collieries the desirability of exhibiting sections of the principal coal seams in the several districts, as well as samples of coal, shale, coal waste, pressed cole, coak, &c. The committee states that it is of the utmost practical interest that samples of the various building materials specified in classes 102 to 104 in the schedule should be exhibited, and trusts that every person engaged or interested in the production of such materials will use his best endeavours to render this department as complete as possible. It is also in the highest degree desirable that every person capable of so doing should contribute to the collection of minerals, metallurgical products, models, maps, &c., specified under classes 105 to 122.

The VICTORIAN POLITICAL SITUATION.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]
(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

MELBOURNE, TUESDAY.

In Sir Michael Hicks-Beach's despatch to Sir George Bowen, dated August 25th last, he says:—

"I desire to make every allowance for the difficulties of your position, but so far as I am able to judge, I do not think that the emergency was of a character which can be held to justify the course which you adopted; and in my opinion you would have done better, in the interests of the colony and in the maintenance of the principles of Parliamentary or responsible government, if you had informed your advisers that you felt unable to put your name to the document directing the removal of these officers. I understand from your despatches, that this course might have involved the resignation of your Ministers, but it might also have led to the suggestion of other means of surmounting the difficulty; and even if these had not been found, and your Ministers after resignation had been restored to office, either on the failure of others to form an Administration, or after a dissolution, it would have been of some advantage that an opportunity should have been afforded to the colony for the full and serious discussion of the step proposed."

BUTCHERS AND BUTCHERS' MEAT.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—"Hear the other side" is a good old English rule, which I am sure the Herald and all its readers will agree with. You have published three articles on "Butchers and Butchers' Meat" which, in my opinion, and in that of others competent to know, are overdrawn. Whether your reporter intended it or not, he certainly conveys the impression that there is no fat stock slaughtered at the Abattoirs, and that the meat is generally unfit for food. In his own words, it is "in most cases in a high state of fever." Mr. Pitt, in his letter of the 5th instant, shows the absurdity of this; and if any impartial person will visit Homebush, he will see what fine fat stock are purchased by the butchers; and afterwards let him go the round of the respectable shops, and he will see as good, sound, healthy meat as is to be bought in London or any town in the world. It may not be so fat as London meat but it is better, for we have no stall feeding with oil-cake here, which makes half a joint run away to dripping in England. I ask sensible persons if they believe that the meat they have all their lives been eating in Sydney, is fevered and unwholesome. I appeal to the housewives supplied by respectable firms, if they are satisfied. Any cook can tell if meat is good or not. Is it to be supposed that all these years there has been "death in the joint," which has only at last been discovered by your reporter? For myself and the other honourable men in our trade, I only ask for fair play and common sense reasoning.

As regards the slaughtering at the abattoirs I will say nothing, but I will put it to any one, if "in the best place, and under the cleanest conditions," the killing of animals with the surroundings of blood and offal is likely to be an interesting sight to any one who has not strong nerves and a strong stomach. Any description of this must read revolting to those not accustomed to the business. I should like to tell your reporter scenes I have witnessed in slaughter-houses in my travels in South America. They might be interesting to the readers of the Herald after your reporter's accounts of the operations at the Abattoirs. But I wish particularly to draw attention to a remark of his, which states a fact I can myself disprove, and conveys a libel on my establishment. Writing about sausage making, your reporter says:—"In no shop that has been visited is the machine as clean as even ordinary attention could make it." Now, when your reporter came to my shop, in company with Mr. Seymour, he saw a new sausage-machine which had just arrived, having been imported by the Lactura. It had not been used, and could not be in the condition he describes, and never will be, for I take care, and I believe the other respectable members of the trade do so, that sausages shall be made in a clean and proper manner. Sausage-making is not a nice sight, perhaps, and your reporter makes it as repulsive as possible, but when he says that "the hands of the butchers should be kept away from the meat," he talks without consideration. You might as well say that the pastrycooks' and bakers' hands should be kept away from their crust and cakes.

As a tradesman of established repute, supplying as I do many large steamship companies, and as an alderman of the city of Sydney, with the goodwill of my fellow-citizens to keep or lose, I ask for your publication of this contradiction of your reporter's statements. And I wish to enter my protest not only for myself, but on behalf of the many other respectable members of the trade who are as honourable and fair dealing a body of men as you will find. Fairplay is all we ask.

Yours, &c.,
THOMAS PLAYFAIR.

CASINO.

TUESDAY.

Surprise and dissatisfaction are manifested at the sudden withdrawal of Halliday and party from the work of removing the obstructions to the navigation of the south arm of the river, thus leaving the work incomplete and of no practicable benefit. This work is all important to the residents of Casino and the Upper Richmond. The want of a Court-house and lockup is again forcing itself upon public attention owing to the forlorn appearance of the present slab building, which cannot hold together much longer. It is hoped that tenders will be invited shortly after the passing of the Estimates, the matter being of pressing urgency to meet the requirements of the next Quarter Sessions.

A public meeting is convened for early in July, to consider the advisability of incorporating Casino.

Local committees have been formed in various townships on the river, with a view of having the Richmond River properly represented at the International Exhibition.

The present freshet in the river is bringing down a fine lot of cedar.

The telegraph lines, Casino to Ballina, via Coraki and Woodburn, have been completed for some time, and the apathy of the department in reference to opening offices at Woodburn and Coraki is unfavourably commented on.

The continuous wet weather will, it is feared, damage the growing crops.

The depth of water on the bar is still causing great uneasiness in the minds of the farmers, and, indeed the whole population of the river.

Those were the instructions, and Mr. District Surveyor Dewhurst in connection with them said :—

"From the examination of these tables (lands sold in each district) and their comparison, made up as they are of cold statistical figures, it seems apparent that the whole of the land alienated to various people, under the protection of all clauses of the Act, will eventually revert as freeholds to the lessees of the various runs: in other words, it appears evident that the Land Act having compelled the lessee to be the largest land-owner, he must necessarily absorb the smaller properties to consolidate his estate. The deduction is inevitable, viz., that the axiom in political economy, that demand is regulated by population, and its corollary, that supply should be regulated by demand, have been hitherto completely overlooked."

[Mr. STUART: That's a mere opinion.] The Minister for Lands ignored the return altogether, and it wa marvellous how they had been ignored during the whole course of the debate. They offered conditions for settling people on the soil, giving them land at less than market price on the ground that they would fulfil those conditions when the officers said that the conditions were ignored to a very great extent. It was an official report, and therefore he was entitled to quote it. [Mr. M'ELHONE: It was perfectly true.] Mr. District Surveyor Twyman, writing from Goulburn, said :—

"Although in the first instance alienation was gradual and the result of demand for produce for local consumption, in a few years, and with a rising market for cattle, it was soon discovered that such occupation was most profitable, and shortly it became devoted to the rearing of stock exclusively, thus competing with the pastoral tenant; then, in defence of his own interests, the squatter endeavoured to prevent the inroads of a class of cattle breeders in a small way, and as the readiest course to preserve the run intact, became the proprietor of land by conditional purchase on his own account, and by means of agents thus a most mischievous and demoralising antagonism was engendered, resulting sometimes in the defeat of the selector, who found himself surrounded on all sides by land in possession of the lessee, and thus deprived of the illusory grazing right over thrice the area purchased, and in other cases in the permanent and beneficial occupation of comparatively small areas for pastoral purposes."

And a little further on he said in the counties of Forbes, Bland, and Gipps, at least three-quarters of the land applied for and measured passes into possession of the pastoral lessees. Now what did the hon. member mean by saying that nine-tenths of the land remained in the hands of the original selectors? That was the hon. member's opinion, and he knew that 500 people in his own district had gone and selected elsewhere. But here was the official report which stated that three-fourths of the land in the district which was free selected passed into the hands of the pastoral lessee. Who were we to believe, the unsupported statement of the hon. member for Camden, or the official report of the Government? Others reported to the same effect. Mr. J. H. Wood wrote from Albury, 3rd May, 1878: "There is such an enormous quantity of land alienated in this district among so great a number of persons, that I am under the impression (the land being scarce) all that is alienated is taken up with a view to being improved and added to large estates upon which are homesteads of a pastoral character." Taken up for improvement, and added to large estates, and this was under these sections which dealt with conditional purchases. He had tried to tabulate the result as far as possible, and what he made of it, taking a general average upon the reports from all the surveyors, was the following, that of the 13,000,000 of acres of land free-selected in this colony 60 per cent. were under class 1, called bona-fide homesteads, and that meant 7,800,000 acres; class 2, speculative, about 10 per cent., 1,300,000 acres; class 3, the black mail class, about 8 per cent., embracing 1,040,000 acres; class 4, dummy selections, about 20 per cent., 2,600,000 acres; and class 5, all other descriptions of selection, 2 per cent., 260,000 acres; making about 7,800,000 bona-fide, 2,600,000 dummy, and 2,600,000 speculative; which meant that in a little more than one-half of the thirteen millions of acres sold under the conditions of free selection the conditions had been fairly fulfilled, and that the rest was under all kinds of false pretences. Now, about these seven millions or eight millions sold under the conditions, remember this: every squatter in the colony had, in all probability, free selected to the full extent of his power by himself, by his own men, by every child under age; in thousands of instances land had been taken up, and the conditions fulfilled on purpose to hand it over to the squatter afterwards. So that this "bona fide" selection was partly by the rich pastoral tenants who were setting the land under conditions which the country never intended. Now, turning to this bill in detail he supposed its purport could be expressed in a very few words. It repeals 31st section of Act of 1875; reduces value of improvements to 10s. per acre; extends the time for making improvements to five years; includes mining selections under same extension of time; applies extension of time and reduction of improvements to all unforfeited selections since January 1st, 1875; prohibits transfers and issue of grants before the expiration of five years from date of purchase—additional purchases to date from time of first purchase; declares improvements on reserves to be unlawful; limits the area of improvement purchases to one twenty-fifth part of total area of run on January 21st, 1878, or date of next ensuing term of lease; limits pre-emptive lease to 6920 acres, beyond which a free selector can claim lease; appoints Government appraisers of runs exclusively, the appraisement not to be lower than the rate of £1 per section of 640 acres or a square mile. That was the whole bill and nothing but the bill. To some of those clauses he had no objection, and he would therefore speak of one or two to which he had objection. As to the 31st clause, everybody would agree now that it ought to be repealed. A more remarkable proof of legislative folly never was put on the statute book of any country. (Hear, hear.) As to the reduction of the value of improvements, why was the reduction required? If you sold land at less than the market price to anybody in the colony, it ought to be for some equivalent advantage. What was that equivalent? It could not be simply residence, for a kangaroo or a 'possum could reside if residence were all that was wanted. It all depended upon what use the man made of the land, and if he did not permanently improve it his residence was of no use to the country. He held that we had no right to sell a hair's breadth of land simply because of residence, and if it was permanent improvement that was required the reduction of the value of the improvements to 10s. an acre would destroy all guarantee that there would be any improvement whatever. If a man sought to improve the land as he should, he would have to build a homestead for himself and his family, and would have to provide permanent water. If he meant to live by agriculture he must cultivate, and if upon the produce of stock he must get permanent water for the stock, and must fence. Let any one think what it would cost a man taking up 640 acres to improve that land so as to render it possible for him to live upon the produce of that land; and if he could not afford to settle on the land he had no right to have it upon these conditions. The worst feature of the bill was the next point to which he would refer. He had no objection to extending the time for making improvements to five years, because in his idea of land legislation he threw out residence altogether. The only thing we wanted was permanent improvement. All future selections, and selections made since 1st January, 1875, were to be brought under these conditions of reduction in the value of improvements. This was retrospective legislation direct, without apology or excuse. Did hon. members recollect that the late Minister for Lands, Mr. Farnell, had stated in answer to a question of his that out of the thirteen million acres selected, there had up to the 30th September last year been forfeited, or there had lapsed, 1,400,000 acres selected since the 1st January, 1875. Pass this bill which would permit all those whose land had not been forfeited, or had not lapsed since 1875, to hold their land without fulfilling the condition of improvement to the extent of £1 an acre, and what would you do with the land forfeited for not having been improved to the extent of £1 an acre? Would you restore it under the condition in this bill? If you did not you would pass most unjust legislation. (Hear, hear.) Why should we have legislation in this way at all? How much land would be affected retrospectively by this legislation? More than half the whole area free selected since this land legislation came into effect in 1862 had been selected since January, 1875, and this would be retrospectively affected by the bill. In regard to the land question generally, he had some things he meant to have stated, but he doubted whether they might be particularly appropriate on a bill like this. There were several members of the House of opinion that private property in land ought not to exist, and they quoted a very high authority, Mr. Herbert Spencer, who asked why any man, just because he happened to be born into the world, before anybody else, could claim any part of God's earth as his exclusive property against his fellow man. But he was not going to run a tilt against such an idea as that; it would probably be a century before ideas of that kind became popular, but it was desirable that the lands should not be accumulated in the hands of a few, and certainly we should not pass a law that would have the effect of placing the land in the hands of a few. The whole tendency of the legislation now was to distribute the land among the people. One of the effects of the French revolution was to break up the monopoly in land, and now, as it had been stated, one-tenth of the whole land in France passed through the market. But the great result had been that the French peasantry were becoming to a large extent freeholders. And it was to this peasant proprietary the industrial recovery of France was due after the prostration caused by the German war. One of the best things Mr. Gladstone ever did for the United Kingdom was that of passing the Irish Land Bill. What was the effect of that? Why, that the absentee landowners—who had been an incubus upon Ireland generation after generation, and had done more to cause her sorrow and her wrongs and her rebellion than anything else—were to have their property equitably taken from them, broken up, and distributed among the people. The return he had quoted from, showing the accumulation of property in England and Scotland in the hands of a few, was, in his opinion, the preparation for legislation, not to confiscate these lands, but by honestly paying the owners a fair equivalent to distribute them among the people. He believed that the best condition of things was that the owner of the soil should be the actual cultivator. This bill would, in his opinion, tend to accumulate the lands of the colony in the hands of a few; and, most of all, it relaxed the condition which the Legislature thought fit in 1861 to impose, namely, that there should be improvement to the extent of £1 per acre. Our land law had been a deception and a mockery to the people. They knew that the selectors had not improved the land to the extent of £1 per acre. It had proved an advantage to the squatters, seventy of whom owned half of all the leased area of the colony; and it was this class also who owned two-thirds of all the free-selected lands. And just because they knew very well that they neither had fulfilled these conditions, nor cared to fulfil them—they had now got a Government, and he was not sure that they did not create a Government on purpose—(cheers)—to bring in a bill to forego the conditions—than which a more immoral or demoralizing piece of legislation was never submitted in Parliament. And he marvelled that the Colonial Secretary and the Minister for Lands, considering the opinions they had expressed in this House could be any party to legislation such as this. He had an amendment to move, and he should put it upon record even though he stood alone. He moved that all the words after the word "that" be omitted, with the view of inserting the following words :—"This House, while willing to redress any grievances that may have arisen under the existing Acts, declines to legislate further in regard to the alienation and occupation of the Crown lands of the colony until it is put in possession of authentic information respecting the original disposition and the names of the present owners of the 29,000,000 acres reported as already alienated and the 150,000,000 acres reported as being under various forms of lease."

Mr. M'ELHONE was fully satisfied, from his knowledge of the working of the Land Act, that not one-third or one-fourth of the land selected was in the hands of bona-fide selectors. Much land which had been taken up originally by the free selector had since fallen into the hands of the squatters by the operation of the second clause, by Volunteer land orders, by the power of sale by auction, and in other ways that they possessed of crippling the free selectors who had to sell out and go further into the country. He believed that the bill introduced by the Farnell Government would have met the approval of the country. He had supported that bill with the hope of amending it in committee. He had much less respect for the present bill. The only good clause it contained was taken from the Farnell bill—that providing for the reduction of the improvements to 10s. per acre, and of dealing with the reserves, so as to take them out of the power of the Crown lessees. He thought, however, by far the most important portion of the Farnell bill had been omitted—that providing for the abolition of interest. No bill would satisfy him that did not provide for that. He contended that improvements to the value of 10s. per acre were quite sufficient to ask from the selector. In many cases the improvements which the State asked to be made were more than the land was worth. Selectors in the New England district were unable to tide over their difficulties caused by their inability to get their grain to market. There was no market for it. And it was well known that enormous areas of land had been taken up by bona-fide selectors, not for agricultural but for grazing purposes. 10s. per acre improvements was quite sufficient to ask the selector to make. In many cases the selectors, to save their selections from being forfeited, had been compelled to make false declarations in order to get out of their difficulties. They ought not to cripple a man by compelling him to spend money unprofitably to himself in the improvement of the land, and which he could expend better in buying stock or otherwise. He should vote for this Land Bill, because of the clause reducing the value of the improvements required of the selector, and endeavour to amend it in committee. It would be the means of saving many persons the land they had selected, and which they could not improve to the value of £1 per acre, and prevent the making of false declarations by others. One reason for which he disliked this bill was this—that it contained the principle of Sir John Robertson's bill of 1861, that the whole colony was left open to selection, whether the land was fit for it or not. While this continued, there was bound to be bad feeling between the squatter and the free selector. That allowed men to go about taking selections, not for the purpose of living on them, but for selling out on the first opportunity. And although the action requiring five years' residence was very stringent, there would be many who would find a way to evade it, as there were many who evaded the penalty imposed by the instrumentality of the hon. member for Camden (Mr. Garrett), namely, two years' imprisonment. He could hardly help remarking upon the wonderful speech made by the present Minister for Lands, in defending the Land Act of 1861. The Minister for Lands pointed out that at places like Tamworth, Young, or Albury, where there were only a house or two at the passing of that Act, there are now large mills. But would the hon. member tell him that it would not have been much better if we had had a land law like that of South Australia. Selection ought to have been confined to agricultural areas, and the consequence of our system has been that the selectors have had in many instances either to sell out of their selections or to fight the squatter, who took up Volunteer order selections all round them. Whenever the selector went to make a home for himself the squatter bought up all round him to prevent him from getting any neighbours near him. The squatters had, in many instances, forced the selectors out of their homes. There were thousands and thousands of acres of rich land where you will not find one selector at the present time. It was an unwise policy to leave the whole of the colony open to selection. There was very little land left now that was fit for agricultural purposes—no land on which to settle down a large number of people together, as had been done in South Australia. If you gave a man a thousand acres for nothing, and fenced it in for him, he would not be able to make a living by grazing, so as to live decently, to say nothing about maintaining and educating his family. And in his own electorate, in some of the richest wheat-growing districts in the colony, where they got thirty bushels of wheat to the acre, the difficulty and expense of getting it to market were so great that they could not make a living by cultivation. If they tried to keep sheep, they could not keep more than a sheep to the acre, even in the best of seasons, and after paying for shearing, and getting the wool to market, it would be a very poor living they would get even out of 640 sheep. In his opinion our land law had been a mistake from the first, although when Sir John Robertson brought in his Land Bill he strongly advocated it. He admitted he did not then see the danger attached to it. The squatters at that time had the whole power of the public estate in their own hands, and land could not be got at all except by auction. The lessees were like the dog in the manger, and the surveyors were mere tools in the hands of the squatters, so that it had become absolutely necessary to carry a revolutionary land measure like that of 1861 to prevent them from crushing the people as they had been doing for a long time previously. But people did not think that that law would eventually hand the land over to the squatters as it had done; they did not see that the power of the purse would be brought to bear upon them, till it was so strong that they could not resist it, and that the land would go into the hands of a few monopolists. As Mr. Farnell had pointed out, the yeoman class in England had decreased by about one-half, and wealthy men had invested their capital in forming large estates. He should be glad to see the day when the Government of England would be compelled to pass a land law to take it out of the hands of the aristocracy and hand it over to the people. Wherever the land laws of England have gone they have brought a curse with them. In France they had been obliged to break up these large estates, and they had had to take similar action in Prussia and Switzerland. The best land law he knew of anywhere was that of the Channel Islands, Guernsey, Jersey, Alderney, and Sarke. The people there are happy and prosperous, because they are working for themselves. He could not help saying that although he approved of the rent of the lessees' runs being increased, he could not approve of the proposal of the Minister for Lands to charge these back blocks at £1 a section. It would be almost impossible in many cases for a person to pay it. It would take from £8000 to £10,000 to stock this waterless country, and very often, before a person could get any return for his money, a drought would set in and he would lose the bulk of his stock. He knew a case in which a man spent a large sum of money upon one of these blocks five years ago, and it was not until the last few months that there had been any rain to make the grass grow or to fill the waterholes. Persons in that position ought to have every consideration shown to them to enable them to recoup themselves for their large outlay. Under the second clause of the bill a man might make eight or ten tanks and yet he could only secure four out of the eight blocks. The rent might appear very low, but he maintained that it was more than the land was worth. The great evil in regard to these back blocks was that a large number of them were taken up by speculators in Melbourne who had no intention of stocking them, but simply held them to sell again at a profit. The Hon. William Campbell, in Melbourne, held 5,000,000 acres of leased land in New South Wales, and there was not a hoof upon it. What was required was that the holders of these runs should be compelled to stock the country; and once the runs were improved and stocked they would carry from ten to fifteen millions more sheep than we had in the colony at the present time. Mr. Garrett the other night denied the statement he made about free selection in South Australia; but the fact as to the law in that colony was that land was first surveyed and offered to auction, and if it were not sold in that way it was open to free selection. The Acts of 1861 and 1875 had not carried out the purposes intended by Sir John Robertson and the Parliament, which purposes were the cultivation of the soil and the making of bona fide homes. Instead of settling people upon the soil the law had in too many cases driven bona fide settlers off the land, and forced the lands into the hands of monopolists who locked it up in large grazing estates. It would take a rebellion to overcome the effects of the land law, or special legislation would be necessary to burst up the big monopolies which were growing up under the Act of 1861. The Minister for Lands called his attention to a clause which made it compulsory to stock land. All he could say with regard to that was that the law had never been acted upon, and we had never had a Minister who dared to carry it out. He supposed the influence of the banks was too strong for them. He was really sorry that he would have to vote for the second reading of this bill, because he knew that without some such bill as this hundreds of poor families would be ruined. He hoped that, while the bill was going through committee, an amendment would be made to remit the interest upon all those selections where the people had resided upon them and not transferred.

Mr. GARRETT desired to correct some statements which had been made with regard to the return from which Mr. Greenwood had quoted. That hon. member had quoted from one or two of the district surveyors' reports, but the return gave ample information as to the working of the law, which the hon. member did not quote. The different district surveyors were required to report specifically upon the following five points :—

"1. The proportion of land taken up under the 13th, 14th, 21st, and 22nd sections of the Alienation Act of 1861 for bona-fide homestead selections. 2. The proportion under same sections taken up for speculative purposes. 3. The proportion taken up on the probable calculation of selling to Crown lessees. 4. The proportion of dummy selections by Crown tenants. 5. The proportion remaining after these classifications, with remarks thereon."

The district surveyors' reports then followed, and at the end of the return there was a synopsis of the whole as regarded settlement. Mr. Surveyor Betts, of the Monaro district, divided the district into two parts, the pastoral and the agricultural. In regard to the pastoral district, Mr. Bett's reported that the proportion of bona-fide homesteads was 30 per cent. of the whole, for speculative purposes 5 per cent., for re-sale to the pastoral lessees 10 per cent., dummy selections 50 per cent. Monaro was famous as the hot bed of dummy selections, and it was there that some of the most glaring cases occurred. Yet even there we found that 30 per cent. of the selections were bona-fide. Coming to Bega (the agricultural part of the Monaro district) 95 per cent. of the whole were bona-fide, 3 per cent. were for speculative purposes, and 2 per cent. only were returned as dummy selections. The Clarence district was divided in a similar way—into the coast district and the inland district. Mr. Surveyor Donaldson reported that 94·40 per cent. of the selections on the coast or agricultural district were bona-fide, and that even in the pastoral district nearly 80 per cent. was held for bona-fide settlement. In the New England district 82 per cent. was held for bona-fide settlement, and in the Gwydir district about 70 per cent. Mr. Dewhurst, of Liverpool Plains, favoured the Government with his opinion, but he was unable to give any figures. He failed to answer the circular of the Surveyor-General, and the report which he had made was entirely speculative in its character.

Well, taking the north-western districts: subdivision settled A was 55 per cent.; in subdivision Bligh and Wellington B, 50 per cent.; and in Warrego C, 50 per cent. Whenever the matter was dealt with in a comprehensive way, the holdings would have to be increased. In the Lachlan district: Settled A, there was 70 per cent. in the Murrumbidgee 70 per cent. in Eastern A and 70 per cent. in Western B, and in the Albury district there was 93 per cent. The reports of the selectors were generally favourable, but some recommended that larger areas be allowed. He contended that the principal object of the Land Act was to promote settlement without special regard to agriculture, because if its objects were limited to the promotion of agriculture a large number of persons would be compelled to pursue unprofitable avocations. The figures he had quoted had shown that the Act had promoted settlement. Taking the districts where free selection had been largely availed of, they would find that since 1861 large quantities of grain had been produced in them. According to statistics of 1876, there were in the Albury district 18,349 acres of land used for wheat growing; in Armidale, 2753; at Bathurst, 2707; Burrowa, 2750; Goulburn, 3616½; at Grafton, 4898 for maize; Gundagai, 3227 for wheat; Macleay River, 3778 for maize. [Mr. GREENWOOD: What does that prove?] It proved that settlement was going on, and that the arguments of the hon. gentleman were not worthy of consideration as compared with those established facts. In some of the old granaries of the colony wheat growing had fallen off, but it had been removed to other quarters, and in some of the districts there was not an acre under cultivation before 1861. A great deal of harm had been done, he would admit, but before he admitted that the law was worse than any other law they would have to prove to him that no crime existed. The law dealt with the greatest temptation to man—the opportunity for holding land—and therefore, it was not to be wondered at that there had been abuses under it. Because the law had not proved an exception to any other human law it was run down by theorists. Was there anything else proposed by doctrinaires and meddlers—[an hon. member: Muddlers]—to take its place. [Mr. GREENWOOD: What do you mean by meddlers?] Those who grapple with things they do not understand. After all the hon. gentleman had said he was left in a muddle as to what was to take the place of the present law; and he just wanted to show the House and the country that the bills of 1861 and 1875 had promoted settlement. In the district of Orange there were cultivated by conditional purchasers 8167 acres. [Mr. GREENWOOD: 40 acres to each person.] Well, the hon. gentleman had just been praising up the small holdings in France. In Queanbeyan, there were 2790 acres; in the Richmond River district, which was only a timber-getting district before 1861, there were 2554 acres under cultivation for maize in 1876. He was only dealing with the question of grain. In Tamworth, there were 4080 acres for wheat. Then we came to the district of the Tumut, where there were a thousand and odd acres cultivated for grain by free selectors; to the pastoral district of Wagga Wagga, where there were 1056 acres cultivated for wheat growing; to Wellington, which was only part of a district, where there were 1846 acres cultivated by free selectors; to Yass, where there were 3380 acres; to Young, where there were 5325 acres cultivated in the same way. From these figures the hon. member ought to be satisfied that there was something like settlement carried out, and if the country was not growing wheat enough to feed itself the cause of the deficiency must be looked for in some direction other than the law. So far as the soil and climate went, a large proportion of the area of this country was good wheat growing country, but what was the good of growing wheat enough for 10,000 people when the nearest township contained only about 1000 people? The wheat was all waste, unless you could transfer it cheaply and quickly. The inability to do that was the stumbling-block to agricultural settlement. But that was no reason why the country should not be used in the way in which it could be used, and we should extend the principles of the law of 1861 and those of the law of 1875, and enable people with small capital to take up areas of land that would pay for pastoral purposes. If it had not been for the opportunities given by the law of 1861 we should have had no wheat grown in the country; but what was the difference whether we grew wheat or clipped wool, so long as the country was occupied, and occupied beneficially? We could grow wheat enough for ourselves, but the population was so scattered that it did not pay to grow wheat; and he thought that the quotations he had made would show that the statements of the hon. member in reference to these matters were entirely fallacious.

Mr. MURPHY said the bill was not original, and thought that the Government, when dealing with this subject, would have brought in a comprehensive measure. He considered the reduction of improvements was necessary. Money unnecessarily laid out on land would be an unprofitable investment for the selector. Fencing was the greatest improvement that could be done on land, and if it were made compulsory it would do away with a great deal of quarrelling and heart-burning. He believed that if the Fencing Bill of Sir John Robertson had been passed it would not have borne heavily on the selectors. One clause in it empowered the squatter to fence and enabled him to call upon the selector to pay for it in ten years. That would not have been hard for him. But the squatters did not want the Fencing Bill; they had dummying in view. He was not one of those who declaimed against the Land Act of 1861. It was to the administration of the Act he had objection; and it had been badly administered from the beginning. As to the rent of the land, there was no man in life could say that £10 was sufficient for 64,000 acres of land. Why, it cost £10 for the clerical work in connection with it. He believed it would be years before they got such a bill as the bill introduced by the Farnell Government. He did not approve of it altogether. However, it was not allowed to go into committee by these gentlemen who had picked the eyes out of it and brought it here. (Hear, hear.) Improvements by the Crown lessee ought not to be allowed. Future selectors, in his opinion, ought to have their interest abolished. Why, in his district there was nothing but second and third class land left for selection. He expected that the fusion of parties in the present Government would have resulted in the production of a better measure than this, which he only regarded as a bill of threads and patches. One feature he hoped to have found was provision for decentralization of the business of the Land Department. He objected to the system of appraisement, even as proposed by this bill. He should vote against the bill, because he did not believe in patchwork legislation; but as there were other members who wished to speak, he begged to move that the debate be now adjourned.

Sir HENRY PARKES thought it too early to adjourn.

Mr. FITZPATRICK supported the adjournment.

After some remarks from Mr. BARBOUR, Mr. GREENWOOD, Mr. J. DAVIES, Mr. W. H. SUTTOR, Mr. DILLON, Mr. THOMPSON, Mr. W. DAVIES, chiefly in favour of the adjournment,

The debate was adjourned until to-morrow.

WHARFAGE AND TONNAGE RATES BILL.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—The Hon. the Colonial Treasurer has recently laid before Parliament a bill to amend the law regulating to the imposition and collection of wharfage and tonnage rates.

As I am largely interested in the wharfage property of this city, and as I also take a warm interest in any proposal to amend the laws which affect the trade and commerce of the colony, I venture to ask your permission to direct attention to some few of the many objections which occur to me against this bill in its present crude form.

The bill proposes to legislate not only for public wharfs but also for private sufferance wharfs. In attempting to do this it leads to results which are absurd, and interferes with the rights of private individuals to an unprecedented and intolerable extent as I shall point out.

Instead of the bill proposing to levy a wharfage rate on some general principle of weight and measurement which could be readily applied by a business man, and on a simple free-trade scale, it is proposed by the 3rd section of the bill to shackle trade and hamper importers and shippers, as well as wharf owners, with a tariff of about 460 different articles, as set out in the second schedule to the bill—a schedule which is longer than the bill itself, and repeats in all its most objectionable features the inconveniences under which our trade and commerce formerly languished when we suffered from the infliction of advalorem and package duties. To add to its embarrassment and uncertainty it is, by the second schedule, proposed to be at the option of the Colonial Treasurer in the case of each article to say whether the wharfage should be ascertained and collected according to weight or to measurement—a task which taken alone will pretty fully occupy the whole time of any less industrious future occupant of the Treasurership.

No discretion is under section 3 allowed to the owner of a private sufferance wharf to charge even less than the prescribed scale or otherwise than under the Act. It is further proposed that no wharfage rates should be charged on goods belonging to her Majesty. Such a provision, if confined to public wharfs, would be intelligible (although unnecessary), but there is no more reason for Government goods occupying room on a private wharf without paying for it than for Government clerks occupying private offices free of rent.

How much simpler and more satisfactory it would be to fix a fair maximum wharfage rate for either weight or measurement at the option of the wharfinger on all bonded goods, and half-rates on all outward goods—the tonnage to be declared on passing entry at the Customs, and in the case of public wharfs the wharfage to be then paid.

But whilst it is perhaps admissible that the Legislature should interfere to fix and limit the rate of charges at private as well as public wharfs as against the owners of goods, it is surely a most unnecessary interference with the rights of private property to attempt to legislate as to the rates to be charged by private wharf owners against shipmasters or other persons who may be desirous of hiring wharfage accommodation.

The Legislature might as well be asked to pass an Act limiting the rents to be charged by owners of private stores, as to interfere with matters which properly form the subject of private bargain between the wharfowners and their customers.

Yet this actually is proposed in the 5th, 6th, 7th, and 9th sections of the bill. Some of the effects of these sections if passed in their present form would be to prevent the owner of a private sufferance wharf ever closing it hereafter against the public or ceasing to allow its use as a wharf. He would be precluded from letting his wharf otherwise than to the first ship that offered so long as there was a vacant berth at his wharf; and he would not be able to keep a special berth for any vessel which might be expected to arrive.

The free access to private wharfs given by the 9th section of the bill is of such a sweeping character that goods landed on these wharfs will henceforth be at the mercy of every thief and loafer in the city, and yet it will be impossible to exclude such persons from private wharfs without risk of an action, seeing the difficulty there will be in business of telling whether they may not be the servants or agents of some consignee or other. This clause has the further effect of making private wharf owners parties to contracts for delivery of goods which may be entered into ten years hence between shippers of goods and owners of vessels under bill of lading.

The 8th section, and the penalties provided for in the 5th sub-section of 14th clause, apply only to public wharfs, and may or may not give a sufficient—certainly a clumsy—remedy for recovering wharf rates at public wharfs; but there is no doubt that by the 9th section of the bill the private wharf owner is deprived of his lien for wharfage, and the only means left to him to recover the rates will be by action in the District or perhaps Supreme Court; and every one who has tried such a remedy knows how unprofitable it will be in the case of goods to sue at law for the small sum due for wharfage from each consignee of a general cargo, whilst in the case of ships, as the tonnage rates will not be payable until the ship is on the eve of starting, and the protection given by the 8th section only applies to public wharfs, the wharf owner will always be incurring the risk with foreign traders of having these rates paid by the fore-topsail.

If an equitable scale based on a principle of weight and measurement, with certain required and easily defined exceptions, is submitted to Parliament, without undue interference with private interests, it will, I feel assured, best meet the requirements of all concerned.

Yours faithfully, CH. SMITH.

A letter from Mr. Childers, received in Melbourne by the last English mail, announces his approaching marriage with Mrs. Gilbert Elliott, widow of the late Colonel Elliott, and daughter of the late Bishop of Chichester. The marriage was to take place at Easter.

THE AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY'S EXHIBITION.

The Exhibition was visited yesterday by about 3000 people, and considerable interest in the different sections was displayed. As will be seen below, some additional awards have been returned, but the machinery returns will not be in until this morning. Poultry and pigeon entries are numerous, and competent judges say that the feathered tribe has never been so worthily represented as this year. The birds will be judged to-day, and the dogs to-morrow. The arrangements seem to give universal satisfaction, and Messrs. Joubert and Wright deserve credit for them.

LAW REPORT.

INSOLVENCY COURT.—TUESDAY, APRIL 22.

(Before the Chief Commissioner.)

CERTIFICATE APPLICATIONS.

In the matter of James Ellis, the application was postponed for insolvent to file particulars, by affidavit, within 10 days, of a bill of sale given by him before his sequestration.

In the matter of Robert Baillie Scott, the application was postponed for insolvent to verify and file accounts under rules 22 and 23, in compliance with a prior order of the Court.

In the matter of Elijah Suttle, an adjourned application was further adjourned for a week, with a view to ascertain information respecting a previous insolvency.

In the matter of James Esther Williams, Mr. Faithfull appeared in support of a renewed application, reading an affidavit stating that he had given a mortgage over a freehold in September last to secure payment of debts due. His Honor said that the statement by no means took away the offence which insolvent's previous evidence had established—namely, that of giving a preference to the mortgagee and other creditors when he had various creditors to whom he owed money some time previously. These creditors had been left without redress. He was of opinion that the insolvent had committed an unjust and fraudulent preference, and his conduct came within the intention of the 17th and 18th sections of the Act; and, therefore, as the case required, he refused the certificate.

The applications of Adolph Boesser and John Nicholson not being prosecuted were struck out of the list; and those of Martin Systrum, Peter Reilly, Charles Matthew Currie, and William Scully were postponed for a week, objections having been filed in the latter case.

In the matter of William Robert Hepburn, on the application of Mr. Dowling, his Honor granted the certificate, after a further suspension of 14 days, on the usual condition of payment of all charges.

In the matter of Malcolm Keyzor, an examination meeting. Alexander Cooper, being examined by Mr. S. C. Brown, on behalf of the official assignee, gave evidence to the effect that he lent £110 to insolvent in different sums, taking a bill of sale; he took possession of some goods, on account of part of the loan; in January last insolvent paid £35, leaving £75 due; he was to get a shilling in the £ per month as interest; insolvent paid two month's interest; the bill of sale was intended as a mortgage to secure the loan and interest; the deed was not registered from an oversight; the morning Keyzor became insolvent he went into the shop and found a bailiff from the District Court in possession under an execution; the boy in charge of the shop said that the bailiff would be paid off; he afterwards went to the shop, and was told not to take possession of any of the things; he conducted the loan transaction as agent for the Messrs. Paisley; he sold the pair opera-glass for 35s., and the other goods of insolvent he took possession of he had in store; he thought their outside value was £45. Malcolm Keyzor deposed that he knew a Mr. Jasper Blair, a Government surveyor, in the Bega district; he had received several theodolites for repair from him; he received one for sale on Mr. Blair's account; he did not give one of these to Mr. Cooper; one of these was sold last year through Bradley and Newton; he did not pay Mr. Blair the money; there was a contra account, and he only owed Mr. Blair a small balance; he returned other theodolites to Mr. Blair; he swore that he did return a theodolite sent to him for repair; it miscarried; he had written to say that he would let Mr. Blair have another theodolite on terms for the one that had miscarried; he had written this without prejudice; he wrote in December last to order two theodolites and some other things from Barker, of London; he afterwards wrote to tell them that he had left business; these articles were to be delivered on payment. Insolvent stated that he had to correct what he had said on a former occasion; he did tell Mr. Woods, when in Melbourne, that he owed Mr. Cooper money. The examination was terminated.

This was an action to recover £200 damages for slander. Sir George Innes, instructed by Mr. Jones, appeared for the plaintiffs, and Mr. D. Buchanan, instructed by Mr. R. B. Smith, for the defendants. In giving judgment his Honor said that but for the poverty of the defendants, he would have given a verdict for £200, the amount claimed, but having regard to that, he found for the plaintiff for £10 10s., stating that he considered the slander utterly unfounded, and a very malignant one.

POLICE.

At the CENTRAL POLICE COURT, yesterday, the Police Magistrate was assisted in the Charge Court by Messrs. Ashley, Perdrian, and Harris.

William Speeding was charged with unlawfully and maliciously wounding. Constable Angell apprehended the prisoner, who in reply to the charge said that prosecutor interfered between him and his wife, and if he had had a revolver he would have shot him. William James Banks deposed that he lodges at St. George's-terrace, Pitt-street, the prisoner's wife being his landlady; between 9 and 10 o'clock on Saturday night he heard a scream down stairs and went to see the cause; he found the prisoner holding and struggling with his wife, and she called upon witness and Captain Redwood to help her; prisoner would not loose his hold of his wife, and witness caught hold of him in order to release her; prisoner raised his right hand and the witness saw in it a knife, like a sheath knife, the blade being about four or five inches in length; he two or three times attempted to strike witness with the knife, but by standing back he avoided the stabs as aimed at him, but in the endeavour to ward them off received a cut on the little finger of the right hand; he ran into a back kitchen and shut the door to escape from prisoner's violence, but he burst in the door and it fell upon him; prisoner there struck at him several times with the knife, and he (witness) ran into the street and went to the station house where he made a complaint; prisoner's wife is the mistress of the house, living apart from her husband, and protected by a Judge's order. By Mr. Bull, for the defence: He (witness) lodged in the house six months before Mrs. Speeding took it; Mrs. Speeding has had it about ten months. Dr. Markey deposed that on the night of the 12th April the prosecutor was suffering from a cut wound on the little finger; it was produced by some sharp instrument; it is not dangerous. By Mr. Bull: The wound appears as though a knife had passed across the finger. John Redwood gave evidence corroborative generally of that given by prosecutor. Prisoner reserved his defence. Committed for trial at the Quarter Sessions. Mr. W. Roberts, jun., conducted the prosecution.

In the Summons Court the Bench was occupied by Messrs. Charlton, Lipman, Fremlin, Hart, M'Lean, Kippax, and O'Connor. Patrick Sherlock, Frank Underwood, and Louis Uhde were fined 10s. each for selling liquors within prohibited hours. In M'Quade v. Cochran, and Yeoman v. Jones, proceedings under the Tenants' Act, a warrant to give the landlord possession was granted in each. Several persons were fined in small amounts for breaches of the Police Act. John F. Cripps complained of George Green that having entered into his service he absented himself without reasonable cause before the term of his contract had expired. It appeared that defendant entered the service on a Monday, and that he left at noon on Tuesday. In reply, the defendant admitted that he left on Tuesday, but alleged that, although he was under no contract to give notice, he did give notice of his intention to leave, and, therefore, remained two days until another man came to take his place. Messrs. Lipman, Charlton, and Fremlin held that the offence was proved, and ordered defendant to pay a penalty of 10s., or to be imprisoned four days. Messrs. M'Lean and Hart put on record that they dissented from the decision.

At the WATER POLICE COURT, yesterday, the Bench was occupied by Messrs. Hunt, Reading, Smith, and Penfold.

Thomas Kelly was charged with being by night in the dwelling of Edmund Imber, in Kent-street, with intent to commit a felony. The prisoner admitted having been on the premises in question, but stated that he was slightly under the influence of drink, mistook the house for another, and finding the door not fastened entered the dwelling. Several members of the police force gave the prisoner a character for honesty and industry. The Bench, however, considered the case sufficiently strong against him to commit him for trial. Bail was allowed; the prisoner in £20, and two sureties in £10 each.

LICENSING BUSINESS.

At the CENTRAL POLICE COURT, before Messrs. Charlton, Callaghan, Calvert, Kippax, Graham, Fremlin, O'Connor, Dixon, J. Davis, W. C. Browne, Harris, Browne, Renwick, Hart, M'Beath, Penfold, Merriman, Palmer, Bull, Dean, Linsley, Roseby, Maclean, and Playfair. Mr. Charlton was voted to the chair.

The following transfers were granted, no objection to them being offered: Patrick Dwyer to John Tubridey, the license of a public house on the Newtown Road; John Malzard to George Lewis, the license of the Petersham Inn, Petersham; Alfred Wright to John Austen, the license of a house situated at the corner of Parramatta and Bay streets; Michael J. Madden to Edward H. Gasquoine, the license of Madden's Hotel; Charles Reynolds to Henry Reynolds, the license of the Tower Inn, George-street, South.

Edward M'Donald, proprietor of the Oriental Hotel, Parramatta Road, applied to have his license transferred to a house situated at the corner of Derwent and Mitchell streets, Glebe. Mr. Gannon, for Mr. Roberts, appeared in behalf of the applicant. Mr. Redman appeared in behalf of the objectors. Sub-inspector Rush opposed the application on the ground that the house did not contain the accommodation required by the Act, and that another public-house was not needed in the neighbourhood. Mr. Rush stated that he had inspected the place, and did not think the accommodation was sufficient, according to the requirements of the Act; there were eight rooms altogether, exclusive of the kitchen and bar, but the rooms were, in his opinion, too small for the purpose intended. Evidence was given to show that within fifteen minutes' walk of the house there were nine public-houses, one of which almost adjoined the house in question, being separated from it by a lane only 16 feet wide. No objection was made to the applicant personally. A Mr. Mackenzie and a Mr. Walker, residents of the Glebe, were called in opposition to the application, their objections being the same as those already stated. Mr. Redman handed in a petition dated October, 1878, numerously signed by inhabitants of the Glebe, stating that there were already a sufficient number of public-houses in the locality, and requesting that no more licenses be granted or removals permitted for a period of two years. One of the witnesses, Mr. Walker, said he had gone into figures, and, comparing the number of public-houses with the number of the residents, he calculated that every working man in the borough would have to spend 15s. a week on drink to enable the public-houses to make a fair profit. It transpired that one of the magistrates on the Bench (Mr. Hart) had signed the petition presented by Mr. Redman, and Mr. Gannon remarked that he did not think it proper that magistrates should sign petitions objecting to publicans' licenses, and then come and sit on the Bench to adjudicate. Mr. Gannon objected to the petition being received in evidence, on the ground that it was not a specific objection to the application before the Court, but was a petition against public-houses generally. Mr. Graham moved that the petition be received, because Mr. Hart whose signature was on the petition was in favour of public-houses, and therefore his signature was evidence that this public-house was not required. The question of admitting the petition was discussed by the legal gentlemen at some length, and ultimately the Bench decided not to receive the petition in evidence. Mr. Gannon urged that the application should be granted, on the ground that his client was a highly respectable man, and that it was probable the result of allowing him to establish a business there would be the closing of some of the other public-houses which would fail to make a profit, and therefore actually reduce the number of public-houses in the locality. Mr. Roseby moved that the application be refused, and Mr. Davies seconded the motion, principally on the ground that the application was objected to by the police. Mr. Playfair moved as an amendment that the application be granted, and Mr. Bull seconded the motion. The amendment was put and lost, and the motion that the application be refused was carried. The meeting was then further adjourned until Tuesday morning next at 11 o'clock. Mr. Sub-inspector Anderson mentioned to the Bench that he had some cases which would last two or three days, and it was necessary that they should be proceeded with without delay, because nothing could be done after the expiration of a month from last Tuesday.

At the WATER POLICE COURT, Messrs. Hunt, Reading, E. O. Smith, and M'Lean presided.

An application to have the license of the Illawarra Hotel, Shelley-street, transferred from Samuel Preston to James Warren, was granted.

A case in which objection was taken to the renewal of the license of the Auld Reekie Hotel, in Pitt-street, to Julia Leader, was postponed, and the meeting was adjourned till Tuesday next.

DESTITUTE CHILDREN.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—In your issue of last Saturday, in an otherwise admirable letter, signed "Marian Jefferis," there is a most unjustifiable insinuation against the character of "our country settlers," in the following words:—

"New South Wales has not taken this step, though it seems she is contemplating it seriously. Objections have been raised to the Boarding-out system, on the ground that most of our country settlers are of a different class to those of the other colonies, or at least to those of Melbourne and Adelaide, and are quite unfit because of their modes of living for the responsibility and training of these children. In Tasmania, where the same objections were urged, they have got over the difficulty by settling most of them in the towns with tradespeople, &c., and the experiment has proved successful. There is no reason that it should not here."

I should like to know when and where "objections have been raised to the Boarding-out system here, on the ground that most of our country settlers are of a different class to those of Melbourne or Adelaide, and are quite unfit because of their modes of living for the responsibility and training of these children?"

I have been present at every Parliamentary debate on the subject of our destitute children, and have taken part in nearly all of them that have occurred for almost a quarter of a century, and I am bound to say, that no such insulting reason was ever put forth, or so, far as I know, ever suggested itself against the establishing here of the Boarding-out system.

Your fair correspondent should, if possible, show how or in what way our country settlers, or their modes of living differ from the country settlers of Victoria, or South Australia, or from their modes of living. So far as I have ever been able to discover the people of the various Australian colonies are very much alike. At any rate, from an intimate knowledge of the country settlers of New South Wales, I claim for them that instead of most of them being unfit for the kind of duty required, most of them are people of estimable character.

"Marian Jefferis" (I am sorry I am not aware of the proper prefix for her name—Mrs. or Miss) is evidently a stranger here, and has come whence great jealousy obtains against New South Wales; and therefore may stand excused for casting an unjust slur on its inhabitants. Especially as the part of her letter relating to "country settlers" has evidently been written with but little thought or care, or we should not be told of the country settlers in Melbourne and Adelaide, and their manner of life. Country settlers might as well be sought for in Sydney as in either of those great cities.

I should not have thought it worth while to notice the slander to which I have alluded, did it not form a portion of a most excellent letter, worthy of the thoughtful attention of the most thoughtful of our people, and evidently written by a lady whose sole desire in the matter was to use her superior powers to do good, and not to injure the fair fame of a large class of industrious and respectable people.

Depend upon it that unless some other reasons can be found against the proposal of your fair correspondent than the low character of our country settlers, it will be carried into successful operation.

Your obedient servant,
JOHN ROBERTSON.

CONTRACTS FOR THE PUBLIC SERVICE.

TENDER FOR COIR YARN.
TENDERS will be received at this Office until noon of TUESDAY, the 29th April, 1879, from persons desirous of supplying the Government with 70 tons Coir Yarn.
Samples of the Yarn can be inspected either at her Majesty's Gaol, Darlinghurst, or at the Colonial Stores, Circular Quay.
The Yarn must be delivered at her Majesty's Gaol, Darlinghurst, in about equal portions half-yearly, and be in every respect similar and equal in value to the sealed samples. The contract will be taken for two years, the first supply to be delivered not later than October, 1879.

P. M'CARROLL.
The butchers' "league" stand clear, the weather now is cold,
M'Carroll's in amongst you, to keep up days of old;
To stop you from extorting, in making people pay
The prices you are charging so shamefully to-day;
And, as to threat of all you'll do, for these he does not care,
Read down below, and there you'll see the prices he has there;
If he can sell so cheaply, why don't you do the same,
The market is before you, then, why M'Carroll blame;
And when the people come and see such meat before their eyes,
They almost feel confounded—they meet with such surprise,
In such prodigious quantity the shambles bearing down,
Enough to feed our soldiery, and every house in town;
And as the winter gets more cold with biting frost and snow,
There stands M'Carroll's well-filled shop for every one to go,
Nor need they fear, tho' winter's here, but he will take them through.
They all must know years long ago, he always used to do;
And here's another winter come, and no one need despair,
With well-filled shop by day and night, M'Carroll's always there.

PURE-BRED CLYDESDALE STALLION.
ROBIN'S EMPEROR.
FRIDAY, 25th April.

T. S. CLIBBORN has been instructed by W. C. Yuille, Esq., to sell by auction, at Fennelly's Bazaar, on FRIDAY, 25th April, at half-past 2 o'clock,
THE PURE CLYDESDALE STALLION.
ROBIN'S EMPEROR.
Brown Colt, 3 years old, by Bantin Robin (imported), dam Belle 2nd, by Marquis of Lorne; g. d. Belle 1st (imported), by Emperor out of Mermaid. Belle 1st gained many prizes in 1870; she took seven first prizes, including the Highland Society's. Belle the 2nd gained first prizes in Adelaide in 1873, 1874, and 1876, and was sold at Mr. Fisher's sale for 300 guineas. Bantin Robin is admitted by all judges to be the handsomest and truest made horse ever seen in Australia, as well as being a great prize-taker, and comes of the purest and best blood in Scotland on both sire and dam's side; when 3 years old he gained the Selkirkshire Agricultural Society's Premium of £40; as a 4-year old, he was awarded the Midlothian Agricultural Association's Premium of £50, as also the Highland Society's first Prize at Dumfries, beating the great Prince of Wales and all the crack horses of the day. When 5 years old he again gained the Midlothian Premium of £50, and also the Highland Society's Champion Medal at Perth, &c., &c.
From the above it will be seen that Robin's Emperor inherits the purest and best strains of Clydesdale blood ever imported to these colonies. He stands nearly 18 hands now, and is one of the grandest looking colts ever seen in any part of the world. He was bred by, and is now the property of, Mr. C. B. Fisher; he can be seen at Fennelly's Bazaar, and is now being shown at the Agricultural Society's Exhibition.
Further particulars at sale.

LE LOUP.
FRIDAY, 25th April.

T. S. CLIBBORN has received instructions from Mr. W. C. Yuille, to sell by auction, at Fennelly's Bazaar, on FRIDAY, 25th April, at half-past 2 o'clock,
The racehorse LE LOUP,
Ch. h. LE LOUP (full brother to Lurline) 4 years old, by Traducer (imported) out of Mermaid (imported), by King Tom out of Waterwitch, by The Flying Dutchman out of Evening Star, by Touchstone, &c., &c.
Mermaid (dam of Le Loup) was bred by Baron Rothschild, and is full sister in blood to Hippia, winner of the One Thousand Guineas, Oaks, &c.; and to Hippolyta, winner of the Ascot Stakes and many Queen's Plates.
Traducer (sire of Le Loup) is by The Libel (son of Pantaloon) out of Arethusa, by Elis, &c., and has proved himself the best stallion ever imported to New Zealand. All his stock gallop, and are noted for their general soundness and hardy constitutions.
LE LOUP has been only six months in training, so that he is susceptible of great improvement; even under this disadvantage he has proved himself one of the best animals in Australia.
LE LOUP is a horse of unusual size and power, allied to great quality.
AS A STALLION he would be an acquisition to any stud, coming as he does from the most fashionable English families on both sides. He is also the only lineal representative of the famous PANTALOON line in Australia; breeders have therefore an opportunity of securing a completely fresh strain of blood—a strain, too, that has shown an affinity to nick with colonial Sir Hercules mares, for Calumny and Trump Card, two as good animals as ever were saddled, were by Traducer dams by Sir Hercules.

FARMER'S CHEAP PURCHASES.—In the list, as under, which Messrs. Farmer and Company have the pleasure to present to the public, such value is offered as can be truly stated no business house in Australia has ever yet tempted purchasers with. Mr. William Farmer, who is resident in London, has been literally besieged by manufacturers, or their agents, compelled by the unparalleled depression that has existed in commercial circles to realise at any price. His selections have been made with faultless judgment, bringing the goods, as below enumerated, within the reach of almost every purchaser.
FARMER and COMPANY,
Victoria House.

FARMER'S.—Bargains in Dress Materials—New French Serges, beautiful shades, 8½d per yard; choice Serge Cashmeres, new and tempting shades, unequalled for value, 10½d; Ladies Camel's Hair Homespuns, the cloth of the season, 1s 3d. Ladies are invited to inspect these goods without delay, as at the prices marked a few days will suffice to clear out the entire lot.

FARMER'S Turkish Towels, extraordinary purchase of 750 dozen; first instalment just to hand. Full size white, good quality, 10s 3d per dozen; ditto, extra quality, 14s 9d per dozen; brown, with red stripe, a nice crisp towel, 15s per dozen. These goods show in a remarkable manner the effect of the present great depression throughout England. In the ordinary way they would be nearly double their present price.

FARMER'S extra heavy Blankets, for single beds, at 13s 6d, are splendid quality, all wool, and will weigh down any blanket that can be purchased at the same price. Their Guinea Blankets, extra sizes, manufactured to special order, equal in value the notorious Guinea Longcloths, which throughout New South Wales are now favourably known.

FARMER'S pure Saxony and Welch Flannels, every known make, splendid value, at 1s 3d; extra heavy at 1s 6d; and a bargain in real Welsh at 2s 6d per yard, usually sold at 3s 3d.

FARMER'S inexpensive Half-guinea Toilet Quilt, is unrivalled for value—a large assortment just opened; also superb quality extra-size Quilts at 21s, usual price 27s 6d.

FARMER'S celebrated Half-crown Carpets are now known throughout the whole of the Australian continent. These goods are incomparable as regards quality and value. There are other Half-crown Carpets, but the people that know will have Farmer's. Also, 250 Velvet Hearthrugs, an exceedingly cheap lot, at 6s 9d and 10s 6d each.

FARMER'S LIST OF INEXPENSIVE UNDERCLOTHING comprises Ladies' plain-tucked Drawers, 23s per dozen; Ladies' Embroidered Drawers, trimmed work and insertion, 45s per dozen; Ladies' Embroidered Chemises, trimmed work and insertion, at 47s, 51s, and 66s per dozen; Ladies' Combination Garments, 45s per half-dozen; Ladies' Black Satin Skirts, 14s 6d to 4 guineas each; Ladies' Mourning Wrappers, in all the fashionable colours, embroidered silk, 45s; Children's Costumes, in nice winter materials, 10s 6d upwards.

FARMER'S Paris Kid Gloves, all the new shades, single button, 2s; two-buttons, 2s 6d per pair, manufactured from a soft elastic kid, the cheapest glove ANYWHERE offered. 1000 dozen to select from.

FARMER'S Twill Silk Sunshades, fashionable shades, an unlimited assortment of mounts, plain and with silver, positively unrivalled at the price offered, 8s 11d each. 400 to select from. Unrivalled Half-guinea Umbrellas, for Ladies' wear, in durable twill silk, silver and nickel mounts; every lady should purchase one. 300 to select from.

FARMER'S pure Lawn Handkerchiefs, hem-stitched, 9s 11d dozen, sold at 15s per dozen during previous seasons, an extraordinary purchase, the entire stock of a small maker, 200 dozens to select from; also, with the above, 200 dozens Cambric Handkerchiefs, equal in value, 1s 11d per half-dozen.

FARMER'S WINTER HOSIERY.—Girls' clerical Derby-ribbed Hose, from 1s 1d per pair; embroidered ditto ditto, from 1s 3d per pair; navy, seal, and black, from 1s 4d per pair; embroidered ditto ditto, from 1s 7d per pair; ladies' Derby-ribbed Hose, navy embroidered, from 2s per pair; a very cheap parcel of ladies' navy-ribbed merino Hose, embroidered, 8s 9d per half-dozen pairs. Ladies should inspect these goods, the styles are all new, and the quality such as we have never before offered at so low a price.

FARMER'S Unrivalled 2-guinea Jacket, style superb, well-assorted shapes, trimmings in good taste, and materials unsurpassed. Every lady should purchase one, price only 2 guineas; another large shipment just to hand.

FARMER'S 3½-guinea Costumes, now being produced in unequalled style. The superiority of Messrs. Farmer's productions in costumes is freely conceded; their best artists have been engaged on those now offered.

FARMER'S Unrivalled Guinea UMBRELLA for Gentlemen is made of stout durable Twill Silk, on Foxe's superior paragon frames, with rustic handle, silver-mounted. The unquestioned cheapness of this remarkable Umbrella has induced Messrs. Farmer and Company to place very large orders. The first parcel of thirty dozen is now to hand.

FARMER'S Standard White Shirt, at 31s 6d the half-dozen, is about the best and cheapest shirt ever offered for gentlemen. It is made for studs throughout, buttons behind, and has the fashionable Cambridge wristbands. The front is of fine durable linen, and a stout pure unbleached calico is used in the body. Note the price.

FARMER'S celebrated Homespun Suits are made to order from genuine Scotch Homespuns. The material is without exception the most comfortable that can be worn. It is manufactured by a Scotch firm, who supply only two or three West End houses in London, a few select tailoring houses in Paris, and (by arrangement with Mr. Fitzgerald during his recent visit), FARMER and COMPANY ONLY, IN AUSTRALIA.

Suits to order £4 15s net cash.

I find that one can easily listen to reading while operating on it.

J. T. FALLON'S ALBURY WINES.
J. T. Fallon announces that, having recently discovered the very extensive substitution of inferior Wines for those of his Vineyard, and the Forgery of his Labels by numerous Vendors of "Albury Wines," he has been compelled to take decisive steps to stop such imposition and wrong, and to get placed before the public in unmistakeable form the well-matured Wines of his Vineyard.
J. T. Fallon is submitting to the public no wine under seven years of age, and all are warranted to maintain the high character they have attained wherever exhibited.
The public should not fail to observe that J. T. Fallon can only guarantee the genuineness of such wines as are obtained direct from himself, or from his recognised Agents, a list of which will be found below.
